

Bigtime Entertainment Comes To High School

Dinner, dance, theatre, music and art.

That sounds like big city entertainment, but last Thursday evening over 500 of Warren County's residents had to travel only as far as Warren County High School to have a first-class experience in the arts.

"A Night of the Arts" was presented by the arts departments of John Graham Middle School, Norlina Middle School and Warren County High School. The program was presented to provide the community with a first-hand look at what has been taking place in the classroom for the past school year.

Activities included a formal dinner prepared and served by Miss Jill Coleman's commercial foods classes. Dinner music was provided by the WCHS Jazz Ensemble, under the direction of James Powell, band director.

Other activities included theatrical performances by Ms. Suzanne Farrar's theatre art students and Kevin Clary's English students. Student art work, under the direction of Ms. Victoria Lehman, lined the halls, providing a variety of artistic expressions. Miss Leigh Anne Perkinson served as mistress of ceremonies.

Student tumblers, rope-skippers and dancers showcased their skills in the school gym, under the direction of Mrs. Lois Williams, John Coleman and Morton Jones.

On the cafeteria stage, student storytellers performed. Bob Marlin's U.S. history classes displayed class projects in the library. Under the management of Ms. Elaine Coleman and Ms. Edwina Rooker, media coordinators, several media students videotaped the evening's events.

"A Night of the Arts" ended with vocal music presentations by the Norlina Middle School Chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Glendora Powell. The singers received a standing ovation for their patriotic finale. The WCHS Eagle Chorus, led by Howard Stultz, performed a number of classical selections before ending with "Like An Eagle," a Warren County High School tradition.

In his closing remarks, Dr. Elton Jenkins, director of secondary education for Warren County schools, thanked everyone for their participation. The closing song was a light-hearted rendition of "Don't Worry, Be Happy," sung by all participating students.

Appreciation Week Is Scheduled Here

The week of April 23-29 has been proclaimed by Gov. James G. Martin as Appreciation Week for County Department of Social Service Workers, Henry Hayes, local department director, said Monday.

According to Hayes, the proclamation was issued to recognize the men and women of North Carolina who work in the 100 county departments of social services. "Here in Warren County, we are very fortunate to have case workers who really care about the persons they serve," Hayes said. "Our goals include doing everything possible to meet the needs of our clients."

Hayes said that his department's regular gathering to recognize the birthdays of those employees born in April will also include an observance of the special appreciation week.

The yard in front of the Graham Street dental offices of Massey and Crenshaw was given a new look Saturday evening, after a 1989 Nissan pickup truck being driven by Waverly Taylor, 21, of Ft. Bragg, plowed up an embankment and broke an ornamental rock wall there. A "Community Watch" sign was destroyed, as well as several shrubs. Before running onto the Massey property, Taylor had collided with the left front of a 1982 Plymouth station wagon being driven north on Front Street by John Thomas Allen, 67, of Warrenton. Damages to the Taylor vehicle have been estimated at $3,500. On May 31, he will face charges of exceeding safe speed and careless and reckless driving, Warren Police Officer Gary Hawkins said Tuesday. Allen's vehicle sustained $1,700 in damages. At press time, an estimate of damages to the dental office property was unavailable.
