Cut-Throatin'

North Carolina Congressmen C. B. Deane and Graham Barden seem determined to try to keep the Air Force from setting up a big air base at Raleigh-Durham airport. They cite the millions already invested at two other places and claim money would be wasted if it were spent at Raleigh-Durham.

They seem either to forget — or have not been informed of — two things:

1. Millions already have not been spent at Raleigh-Durham, too.

2. If Raleigh-Durham is not selected, the air base will not be placed in North Carolina, according to information from Washington.

It seems the Air Force took a look at both Laurinburg-Maxton and Seymour Johnson and found neither acceptable for the job.

Perserverence

Another sign that perserverence pays off: the cornerstone of the new Highway Building was laid last week. Highway Commission Chairman Henry Jordan kept pushing architects and contractors — some folks even accused him of getting out at night and working on the building himself. Anyway, as the result of his prodding the building is more than half-completed. Some of the slower boys still haven't even awarded contracts yet — they were going to wait for cheaper prices — or something.

Unhappy Willis

From Washington comes word that Willis Smith — the senator who was going to solve North Carolina's racial problems — is unhappy and that there soon will be a new U. S. district attorney in Raleigh.

Conservation

Seems that Walter Damtoft of Asheville believes in conserving manpower. In addition to being secretary of the Champion Paper and Fiber Company at Canton, he also is a member of the State Board of Conservation and Development.

But that ain't all, according to a report from Washington. Seems as though Damtoft has a job with OPS as well. Someone should check that last, because if it's true then Mr. Damtoft seems to be in the double-office holding classification and should either resign from the C&D board or quit his Washington job.

While on the C&D subject, some folks expressed surprise that Governor Scott did not reappoint Eric Rodgers to the board. The answer to that is simple: Kerr Scott is not the type of man to hand another knife to someone who seems bent on stabbing him in the back — politically, speaking, of course.

Odds and Ends

George Ross, director of the department of Conservation and Development, continues to have forestry troubles. It wouldn't be surprising if some tree-pruning isn't done soon . . . Will Yarborough, Raleigh attorney who's a cousin of the late Governor Bickett, may be a candidate for the Legislature from Wake next year. His platform: equal but separate schools . . . Don't be surprised if something like the "white supremacy" campaign of 1900 blossoms forth once again, since the Yankee leaders of NCAAP seem determined to undo all of the good work done to advance race relationships during the last 50 years . . . And, it's likely that North Carolina soon will have a new adjutant general. Seems as though J. Van B. Metts is planning to retire from that post in the not too distant future. His replacement will likely be a man well-known and liked by N. C. National Guardsmen.

THIS, THAT, AND THE OTHER

ony of watching guinea hens with hidden nests by picking up the ripe, juicy apples from where they lay on the ground among the clover and the bees under the tree. A little later than Early Harvest or Red June, they have more firmness and are — or were — the first apples worth considering for drying. Canning was not begun until late apples ripened.

Those of us who had hoped the limit had been reached in weeks and the misses chosen as their queens groaned anew on reading that some girl has been named as Miss Idaho Potato Lover Week. Naturally, she had to pose in a bathing suit. How else could an Idaho Potato Lover display devotion—or herself?

To date I have not found anything so soothing for prickly heat as laundry starch mixed with witch hazel to form a thin paste. Coat the affected parts thickly with this, then take a nap while it dries. It does not soil or stain, and really gives great relief.

My husband planted seeds of the new watermelon, New Hampshire Midget. Two have been the same size so long I think they must be ripening. Each is about as large as a medium-sized cantaloupe, grayish-green in color. This melon is supposed to be plenty for not more than two persons. If ours are fair samples, the eaters will not have the appetite for watermelon that I grew up with, when a sister and I could eat one weighing twenty pounds. But the midgets are just right for the refrigerator.
