JOHN M. OGLESBY, City Editor.
CONCORD, N. C., JUNE 28, 1910

Congress has authorized two more battleships. It is estimated that each ship will cost $12,000,000 to build and $1,000,000 a year during its 20-year life time to maintain. The aggregate ultimate cost of each ship, as a matter of fact, is, therefore $32,000,000. The cost of each ship would buy 8,000 farms at $4,000 each; it would construct 1,600 churches throughout the country at $20,000 each; it would furnish the means of education through a four-year course to 16,000 men or women at $500 per annum; it would build and equip 50 manual training schools with necessary tools and appliances giving a trade to 75,000 young people each year; it would build a macadam road from Chicago to New York, or build and equip 40 Y. M. C. A. buildings of magnificent proportions, each building accommodating young men in a city of 200,000 people.

Mr. Foushee, manager for Judge Manning, claims that he will be nominated by a safe majority, while Mr. Dorthch, Judge Allen's manager, is even more confident that his man will be the nominee. The closeness of the vote between them will increase the interest in and attendance upon the State convention to be held in Charlotte July 14. While it seems that Mr. Lee is far in the lead for corporation commissioner, it is well to remember that his chief opponent is Judge A. W. Graham, and that there is no more powerful political influence in North Carolina than that which supports him. This, unlike the judgeship contest, is a three-cornered fight and it may take many ballots to decide it.

The Raleigh Times, which supported the regular ticket in Wake, and whose ticket was defeated by the insurgents, has the right ring in its issue of Monday. It says:

"When you go in the primary you are honor-bound to support the nominees. Let every democrat stand by the nominees and help win a glorious victory in November. We owe this much not only to our party, but to ourselves.

And again:
Napoleon said he could whip the whole world if he could only keep his armies divided. Let us come together and present a solid front to the enemy before they get between us and sow the seed of discord.

Farmers Union Growing.
Wilmington Star.

Next thing we know the Taft administration will have its eyes on the "farmers trust." The Farmers' Union of America has grown to be one of the greatest organizations in this country but it is not organized in "restraint of trade." It was called into existence for the benefit of agriculture and to promote and protect the agricultural interest upon which all other interests depend. Incidentally the Union aims to keep other people from restraining the trade of the farmers.

The Farmers' Union is a powerful organization and it has not only spread throughout the United States, but it is invading Canada. The Canadian wheat growers are enthusiastic over it, because they see that "in union there is strength." The organization stands by the producers and they will come very nearly getting their own as long as they keep their heads together and steer clear of politics.

The Southern cotton growers know what the Farmers' Union is, and, through their organization they have made their influence felt throughout the cotton-consuming world. We have no doubt that better prices for cotton are largely due to the uniting of the farmers. They are not crushing anybody, but they are going to see to it that nobody shall crush them. We are not running for office, but we stand for the farmer.

REFORMATORY FOR NEGROES.

Charlotte Observer.

"Give me the child during his early years and I care not who influences him in later life," exclaimed a wise old Catholic priest, and the remark contains a vital truth. The progress of any community depends largely upon the advance made in the methods by which its young are trained. North Carolina has taken a decided step in the right direction in establishing the Jackson Training school at Concord, but there is an immediate necessity for a similar institution for the colored race. The North Carolina Colored Reform School Association, of which C. H. Watson, a well-known and respected colored citizen of Charlotte, is manager and solicitor, is engaged in a campaign for funds to be devoted to the establishment of such a school. The worthiness of the association's cause is not open to question, and the consummation of its object will be attended with great benefit to the State.

The crying need for a colored reformatory was aptly illustrated by a case tried in the recorder's court this week. Two colored boys, aged respectively 10 and 12 years were charged with stealing a horse and buggy. Upon their own testimony no doubt of their guilt could be entertained, and the recorder had no choice but to bind them over to the superior court, under a bond which under the circumstances is equivalent to a jail sentence until their case is called. The ordinary sentence in the higher court for such an offense would be a term upon the roads, where the environment is such as to make a life of crime the most natural career for the youthful offenders after their release from the chain-gang. If the hundreds of negro lads in like case could be placed in a school where opportunity would be offered to develop the best rather than the worst in them, society would be the gainer by approximately an equal number of industrious thrifty citizens, trained for the proper performance of life's duties. In the case of many a wayward lad of both races a little encouragement such as such a school offers has been known to work most gratifying results, and the State and its people could make few more fruitful investments than would be found in a colored institution planned along the lines of the Jackson Training school.

Wilkesboro Chronicle: "We suppose Congressman John Motley Morehead took the oath to support the constitution and laws of the land like other officers of the government. He is sending out purely personal political letters through the mails under his frank fee of postage. Morehead was among those who wanted to increase the postage on newspapers to make up the deficit in the postoffice department. The fact is, if Morehead and the political government graders would pay the postage required by law there would be no deficit in the postoffice department."

Says the Wilson Times: The American Tobacco company's action in subscribing to $1,000,000 State bonds at this time and their readiness to take more if necessary shows that big corporations have souls. This company, owned so largely by the Dukes, made the calling of an extra session of the State legislature unnecessary and thereby saved the State a large expense and the members of the general assembly great inconvenience. The Duke family are patriotic and generous citizens. They have given to Trinity College alone near $1,500,000 and much to other institutions of the State."

COWBOY BARONET SEEKS BRIDE TO PAY OFF ANCESTRAL DEBTS

Photos by American Press Association.

SIR GENILLE CAVE-BROWNE CAVE, WHO SEEKS A RICH WIFE, DIS PLAYING SKILL WITH LASSO.

Is there any American maid, spinster, widow (all over seventy provisionally barred, likewise divorcees) who would like to marry into the fifth oldest family in England, pay off a stack of perfectly good mortgages on ancestral halls, etc., and be known in court as "my lady?" This is not a frivolous question, but meant in all seriousness. Sir Genille Cave-Browne-Cave, the eleventh baronet of that name, is in New York looking for a wife with money.
Sir Genille has been known pretty widely in this country as the "cowboy baronet," although he did not come into his title until three years ago, when his father died. At the time the paternal baronet died his son and heir was punching cows in Colorado. He had been a ranchman in this country since 1880, and what he didn't know about cattle and roughing it on the frontier was known to few sturdy six footers who walked in chaps and Mexican boots.
But Cowboy Cave-Browne-Cave never plotted matrimony. He preferred shooting up ranch towns and mining camps or tracking a horse thief. He was built for the strenuous ways of man and did not banker the thickest bank for domestic desuetude.

"Kid Cave" Transformed.
Now all that is changed. Returning to England in 1907 and finding himself a baronet and the head of a house of the very oldest British vintage, it was necessary for "Kid Cave," erstwhile of the Half Circle B ranch, to brush up his manners and act party. His mother, the dowager Lady Cave-Browne-Cave, introduced her strenuous son to all the ladies and lords, as none, not even the most terrifically titled dukes, has anything on the Cave-Browne-Caves in the way of antiquity. The Cave-Browne-Caves have been hereditary knights since 1068, which is some time ago.

He didn't advertise for a wife in England, as he didn't believe there were any Englishwomen who had money enough and at the same time were anxious to wed a partly American baronet—that is, American in style. Moreover, he didn't like the looks of the few slim English ladies who were pointed out to him.

"Not that I really give a hang for looks in this matter," said Sir Genille in discussing it. "She may look as she pleases, hang it all, if she's got the tin, and so long as the tin is guaranteed I'll bar none in petticoats under seventy, save and except, of course."

SCRIPTURE IN LORIMER CASE

Legislators Who Voted For Him Exhort to Confess.

Confident that a spark of moral responsibility still may exist in the breasts of the members of the Illinois legislature, "An Interested Citizen" has undertaken to fan it into flame by means of moral suasion.

Each member of the body that made itself famous by electing William Lorimer to the United States senate received an envelope containing fourteen slips of paper, each slip bearing a scriptural quotation. Each of the fourteen quotations is selected apparently with a view to the psychological effect it is to have upon the reader if that reader is harboring some guilty secret. The idea of the slips, in short, is to make the legislators confess complicity in recent corruption.

On top of slip No. 1 was a fifteenth slip, printed on slightly heavier paper than the others, on which was the following:

Friend—Read these and ponder.
A SINCERE WELL WISHER.

Some of the proverbs were:
A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall not escape.—Proverbs xix, 5.
I was almost in all evil in the midst of the congregation and assembly.—Proverbs v, 14.
He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house, but he that hateth gifts shall live.—Proverbs xv, 27.
He that covereth his sins shall not prosper, but whose confessioneth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.—Proverbs xxviii, 13.
If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—I John 1, 9.
