Annual Junior-Senior Banquet at Mt. Pleasant.

Last Friday evening the Annual Junior-Senior Banquet was held at Mount Pleasant Seminary, the spacious halls, rooms and dining-hall lending themselves graciously to this form of entertainment. The decorations were simple but beautifully appropriate, streamers of pink and white (the Senior colors) being mingled with green ivy and other vines and white wild blossoms—green and white being the chosen colors of the Junior Class. In the music studio members of the Junior Classes of both institutions served punch and candies during the evening.

The amusements, up to eleven o'clock, were quite unique and interesting, and the whole program for the evening's entertainment was artistically set forth on souvenir hand-painted fans; this combined program was fully carried out up to the time allotted for the banquet. Tables were scattered in the large Assembly Hall on which games of Cubical Hearts were played; and prizes were bestowed on the winning couples in each contest. Dancing the old-time square dance was kindly permitted by the presidents of the institutions and was highly enjoyed by all who participated. At the last moment the musicians and cellists failed to put in their appearance; but Mr. R. H. Harris ably performed the latter office while Miss Ethel Noback, welder and her auto-harp came nobly to the rescue as regards the necessary music.

Then came the most important part of the program—the banquet, which was indeed a gorgeous one and reflected much credit upon the culinary and artistic skill of the two Junior classes. It is useless to attempt to describe all that loaded the many jointed tables, as it would be an easier matter to mention what they did not have. The entire menu was written out in French, and those who could not understand the names of the various dishes could and did learn all about them by means of the generous samples provided for the happy banqueters. It was also a "feast of reason and a flow of soul," as the many clever speeches and toasts testified, the toastmaster being Mr. John Kerns. It was in the "wee sma' hours" when they dispersed to their respective "polder" homes, a thoroughly happy and excited crowd.

The College Glee Club will give an entertainment in the Auditorium Friday night of this week, and we can promise in advance a time of rare enjoyment for all who may attend. All the inhabitants of Mt. Pleasant, scholastic and otherwise, are highly enjoying the innovation of a tri-weekly moving-picture entertainment at the Auditorium. The Lenoir College film, shown last Friday and Saturday nights, were especially fine.

Winters No Colder Today Than in the Olden Times.

(By the Associated Press.)
Washington, April 18.—The earth is undergoing no general change of climate.

Despite repeated assertions around the stove in the general store, that winters are gradually growing milder, or harder, as the case may be, the United States Weather Bureau declares there is no evidence of a progressive change of climate in one direction or the other.

The fact that the last two years have been unusually mild in most parts of the country has provoked many assertions that winters are becoming warmer, bureau officials say, but records can be furnished to the contrary. Periods have occurred and will occur again, when for a few years the weather has seemed or will seem to be noticeably warmer or colder than the average. While there are well-recognized alterations in climatic conditions, as of wet and dry, hot and cold, little is known with regard to definite laws of sequence of weather conditions over extended periods.

Warfare and brutality of any kind is unknown among the Eskimos. When they have differences they adjust them by staging "singing duels," the old men of the tribe acting as judges. In their hunting expeditions they endeavor to give their quarry as little pain as possible.

MEMORIAL TO ANDREW JOHNSON.

The Little Tailor Shop at Greenville, Tenn., to Be Dedicated May 30.
Greenville, Tenn., April 18.—Citizens of Greenville hope to have the honor of welcoming President Harding or a member of his cabinet on May 30 next, when the little tailor shop of Andrew Johnson, bought and restored through an appropriation by the Tennessee legislature, is to be dedicated as a permanent memorial to the seventeenth President of the United States and the only tailor to reach that exalted place.

The shop is a one-story frame building about twenty feet in length and fifteen feet in width. Over the front door is still to be seen a sign, "A. Johnson, Tailor." It is not, however, the original sign used by him when following his trade, but a close imitation. The original sign was stolen early in the civil war, and another one placed there when Johnson returned at the close of his term as President also disappeared, and the one now there was placed over the door at the time when his funeral services took place. Even this is repaired, and a portion of the board on which it is painted has been carved away.

Nearly a century has passed since the smooth-faced tailor boy first appeared on the streets of Greenville, demanding only an opportunity to work and to make by the labor of his hands an honest living. Greenville itself was then only a hamlet with but three or four stores, two blacksmith shops and the quaint frontier houses built of logs. These were all that there was in addition to the schoolhouse, the State Medical Society in Asheville, the form what was called a town. On two sides the forest, unbroken, intruded almost to the doors of the dwellings, while on the other sides deep gaps in the forest gave room for fields of waving corn.

The little shop which is to be preserved as a memorial, filled with relics of the President, was the first shop occupied by Johnson as a tailor. In a few years after locating in Greenville he selected a life partner in the person of Eliza McCardle, an excellent and respected woman who taught her husband, the future President, to read and write. The back room was occupied as a home, while the husband discussed politics with his friends and plied his needle in the front room, which was the shop.

In the course of time Johnson acquired title to the little lot on which the shop now stands, as well as another lot almost directly across the street, on which was a small house, which was long since been torn away. This little house he then occupied as a home. There was no building on the lot where the tailor shop now stands, but the tailor shop which has so long marked the place, was standing a short distance down the street, and the owner proposed to sell it to make room for another building. Johnson bought it. It was then thought a great achievement to roll it in position without its being taken to pieces, but this was successfully accomplished and Andrew Johnson, though in humble quarters, became a real estate owner.

It was in the little tailor shop and in the little home opposite that the happiest days of his life were spent by the man who was to rise from village alderman and member of the legislature to be a representative in Congress, the governor of the State, United States senator, vice-president of the United States, and, by reason of the act of an assassin, was called in one of the most critical periods in history to fill the chief executive office of the nation.

Eat Prunes if You Wish to Grow Fat and Plump

THIN MEN AND WOMEN, DO YOU WANT TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG?

The trouble with most thin folks, who wish to gain weight, is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish hygienic culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract properly assimilates the food you eat. Drink a glass of cold water four or five times a day and take the following preparation, known to reliable druggists almost everywhere, which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This preparation is called Prunition, and much remarkable testimony is given as to its successful use in flesh building. Prunition taken on meals to prepare fat, flesh and muscle building elements so that the blood can readily accept and carry them to the starved portion of the body. You can readily picture the transformation that additional and previously lacking flesh-making material should bring to your cheeks, filling out hollows about your neck and shoulders, and your rising on from 35 to 30 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Prunition is harmless, inexpensive, efficient. The Gibson Drug Store is selling quantities of it to its customers daily. If you need a tonic try it at once.

Caution: Prunition is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

Here in Interest of Home For Motherless Children.

Miss Beda Laird was in the city this morning, and will return here Friday to remain over Saturday in the interest of the Economy Home for Motherless Children at Kings Creek, S. C. This institution is just over the North Carolina line and is an institution for both North and South Carolina. It is warmly endorsed by Hon. W. G. Harvey and other prominent South Carolina. Rev. J. H. Spaulding, a Wake Forest man, is the superintendent.

An effort is now being made to build two new cottages at the Home, and funds are being solicited for this purpose.

The Home takes no children regularly admitted into an orphanage. It now has 578 applications from children for homes, which it is not able to accommodate.

The Economy Home is chartered and licensed by the State of South Carolina. J. N. Nesbitt, M. D., of Gaffney, S. C., is president. It is on the Southeast side of Kings Mountain battle-ground, two miles of Kings Creek Station on the Southern Railway on the backbone of a beautiful, high range, at one of the finest mineral springs in the state, formerly known as Piedmont Springs.
