A High School Girl Calls Down a Drummer.

Recently a Winocoff high school girl, while waiting at her family physician's office was drawn into a conversation with a drummer. Later he appeared in the "jitney" as she returned home. A few days later she received a warm letter from him full of taffey and a request to correspond and call on her.

She answered as follows:
My dear Mr. Davis,
You might even die to save us.
But I'm only fourteen.
Dad says too young for courting.
But, as a salesman, I extend to you my greeting,
And trust that you are meeting
With success and that you're beating
Any record made before.
If you're not, locate the trouble,
Make your sales run more than double
It may only be a bubble,
That has hindered you before,
Too much flirting—nothing more.

If you'll look you'll see your defects,
It's flirting with the high school elects,
You'll lose half your business prospects.

Half at least if nothing more.
Lots of men have your bad habits,
Seems drummers especially "grab it,"
Such fellows hop up like rabbits,
Just hop up and nothing more.

Now you follow my prescription,
Stop your habit of making friction,
Give your wife your best affection,
Look more after your firm's election,
Sell their goods from door to door,
Take their recipe before retiring,
Your wife of you will soon be tiring,
And through the counts, will you be firing.
If I send her this and nothing more,
Yours truly,

OLD "BEEF-EATERS" IN OLD UNIFORMS

Tower Customs Shown in "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

The only modern dress in Cosmopolitan's pietization of the famous romantic novel, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," with Marion Davies as the star, is the uniforms of the guards of the Tower of London—and that is because they are the same today as they were four hundred years ago. Tourists who have visited that grim fortress-prison, will readily recognize the "beef-eaters" as they appear in the picture. How they acquired the nick-name by which they have been known in recent years is unknown.

The Tower of London was not always the grim prison that is so notorious in English history. The wedding of Henry VIII and his first wife, Catherine of Arragon, was celebrated there, and also his marriage with Anne Boleyn, who was subsequently beheaded there. In the early days of his reign Henry VIII used the Tower as one of his palaces, and it was then that he pressed the guards in gorgeous uniform.

Hampton Court, the great palace built by Cardinal Wolsey, is another monument of Tudor days still preserved in its original form, and faithful reproductions of both these historic structures are interesting features of this great Paramount picture which will be shown at the Star theater Tuesday and Wednesday. "The Beef-eaters" still carry the enormous hauberts with which they were armed in Tudor times.

WIFE NO. 1 MAY DECIDE TO TAKE HER HUSBAND BACK

Walter Crawley Wrote Salisbury Police to Ask Wife to Forgive Him.

Salisbury, May 7.—Walter E. Crawley, newspaper pressman, who deserted his family of wife and five children here some months ago and later married another woman, writes Chief of Police J. W. Kesler that he wants wife No. 1 to forgive him and let him come back to her. Crawley writes from Norfolk, but does not say how he came out in the case charging bigamy, which case was to have been tried at Wilmington, to which place Crawley having been held here until he made satisfactory settlement with his first family by deeding his wife his land near Salisbury.

Chief Kesler took the matter up with wife No. 1 and she expressed a willingness to open negotiations with her erring husband with a view of letting him come back.

Death of Rev. P. M. Trexler.

Salisbury, May 7.—Dr. Peter M. Trexler, for many years pastor of Reformed Churches in this section of the state and one of the best read ministers of that church, died this morning at 7 o'clock at his old home place eight miles east of the city, death being caused by pneumonia which followed a partial stroke of paralysis.

Dr. Trexler lived alone at his old home and last Friday was harrowing a field near the house. A neighbor woman missing Dr. Trexler from his house and seeing his horse in the field investigated and found him lying on the ground where he had been for six hours or more. Dr. Trexler retained consciousness until just before his death but was not able to speak after being found.

Dr. Trexler was 79 years old and is survived by five children. Three of these, Mrs. Ben Eardhardt, Mrs. J. W. Smith, and Guy A. Trexler, clerk in the local postoffice, live in Salisbury. Two other daughters, Mrs. Jno. Lyntly and Mrs. Herbert K. Lutz, live at Granite Quarry and Albemarle.

Dr. Trexler served a number of Reformed Churches as pastor, and had taught school, but in recent years had lived a retired life. The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Mount Zion church, near China Grove, of which church Dr. Trexler had twice been pastor.

(Dr. Trexler was at one time pastor of Trinity Reformed Church of Concord, and was greatly beloved here and throughout this section.—Editor.)

When the horse-car squealed aloud

REMEMBER it? The flanges squealed as the car rounded a curve. The hand-brakes squealed when they were applied and groaned when they were released. The springs complained always. What was the matter? Friction, mostly. Just friction.

Now in 1923, the transportation picture is quite different. So great has been the increase in motor transport during the last ten years that the country's investment in motor vehicles is now greater than the investment in rolling stock of all street railways and steam railroads combined.

Without improved lubrication this development would have been impossible. This company has spent years in the perfecting of Polarine, the "Standard" oil for motor lubrication. It prevents wear and makes all the power effective. Ask for Polarine—not "a quart of oil."
