Brigands Promise to Free Captives Within Four Days. Tientsin, June 9.—The chief of the Shantung train bandits now holding eight foreign captives in the Paotzuku mountain stronghold, has promised that the prisoners will be released within four days, according to a letter received today by the French consul here from Emile Gensburger, a Shanghai broker, who is among those held.

While the general health of the prisoners was said to be satisfactory all those who were ill having virtually recovered, intense heat is causing some discomfort.

Some of the bandit guards seem to be willing to do anything for their captives, while others indulge in petty tyranny. J. B. Powell, Shanghai newspaper man, is said to have lost his temper recently and knocked out one of the guards who had become offensive. The bandits are continually quarreling among themselves when they are not conversing with the prisoners.

Ray Anderson, American intermediary, and the Chinese government envoys left today for the Paotzuku mountain for what is expected to be the final session of the negotiations for the release of eight foreigners still held by the bandits there. The Chinese commission is taking with it additional clerks to complete enrollment of the outlaws in the army and hundreds of uniforms and arrears of wages which the brigands claim to be due them for previous military service.

FAIR WEATHER FOR COTTON

Week's Condition Generally Favorable for Corn, Too. New York Times, 7th.

The weekly weather report of the Department of Agriculture issued at Washington yesterday in part follows:

In general the weather during the week was more favorable in much of the cotton belt than for several preceding weeks, although it continued decidedly unfavorable in some sections. Beneficial showers occurred in Texas and less rainfall was beneficial in the central portions of the belt, which permitted of better progress for field work.

Frequent heavy rains continued, however, in the more southwestern districts, which, together with the cool weather, gave unfavorable conditions for cotton.

The progress and condition of early planted cotton in Texas was mostly fair to very good, but the late planted got a good start, because of drought and cut worms; chopping and cultivation made good progress.

In Oklahoma rainfall was again general, and the crop either advanced, or progress or deteriorated, with much replanting necessary; there was considerable hail damage in the west central and southwestern portions. Less frequent rains and moderate temperatures were more favorable in Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, and Mississippi. Cotton showed some improvement in Arkansas.

It continued in very poor to poor condition except in some favored localities. Very good progress was reported in Louisiana and the fair weather the latter part of the week permitted of much needed cultivation in Tennessee.

Good corn weather prevailed in the central and northern states, east of the Rocky Mountains and the crop showed general improvement with the more favorable temperature conditions. Planting was nearly completed in the Ohio Valley states and in Iowa and cultivation of early planted progressed. The conditions of the crop continued generally good, however, in Iowa and little cultivation had been possible because of slow growth and there was considerable complaint of weedy fields. The crop grew fast in Missouri, where it has a good color, but is becoming grassy in some wetter districts. Fields were grassy also in Kansas and Oklahoma, but the progress and condition of the crop was mostly fair to very good in those states.

Growth was rapid in Kansas, but cultivation was needed as continued rains have interrupted field work. Early planted corn came up nicely in the more northern plain state, but the weather was too cool for this crop west of the Rocky Mountains. Corn did well as a rule in the Atlantic Coast area, but more rain was needed in most central and northern sections. The weather was favorable for planting in the more northeastern states, and this work had become general in that section.

Wheat was heading as far north as Pennsylvania, Northern Illinois and Nebraska. This crop made fair to very good progress during the week in most Ohio Valley localities, but was reported as heading short in most of Ohio and Northern Illinois. The crop made excellent progress in Missouri, where it was heading out generally and much in bloom, while growth was mostly satisfactory in Iowa. Wheat showed improvement in Nebraska. Conditions continued favorable in Kansas but there was much fly and chinch bug damage in that state.
