Former President of College Honored.
The following account of a banquet given by Mrs. C. A. Cannon appeared in the last edition of the N. C. Christian Advocate:

A reunion of the class of 1911 was held at Greensboro College this week in honor of Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, known and beloved throughout Southern Methodism, and who was former president of the college.

Mrs. D. A. Garrison, of Gastonia, attended the reunion, accompanying her being her sister, Mrs. C. A. Cannon, of Concord.

Monday an elaborate six-course luncheon was given in the banquet hall of the O. Henry Hotel by Mrs. C. A. Cannon, honoring Mrs. Robertson. The decorations expressed the class colors both in silken draperies and in flowers. Close friends of the honoree and hostess composed the party—Charlotte Observer.

We wish to congratulate Mrs. Cannon upon this expression of her love and appreciation of our beloved and honored conference president, Mrs. Robertson.

Perhaps no woman in North Carolina has in the course of the years come in intimate touch with so many women as has Mrs. Robertson. For many years president of what was then Greensboro Female College, she touched the lives of hundreds of young women, many of whom are today leaders in their communities, and all of whom are stronger and finer for the influence and guidance of the president of their alma mater.

Also as president of our conference missionary society since its organization thirty-three years ago, Mrs. Robertson has led the Methodist hosts of women in paths of pleasantness and peace—yet more, she has led us ever on the upward way: "Forward, forever in the Master's name" has been her loud call to us, and inspired by such a leader to follow, not afar off, but closely, has been and is a joy to the hundreds who love and revere her.

Reception at Kannapolis.

Tuesday night Miss Ethel Ketchie gave the graduating class of '23 of Kannapolis High School a reception in honor of three members of the class who are leaving to spend the Summer at Asheville, namely Misses Norma Scarborough, Ruth Goodnight and Eva Goble. Refreshments were served carrying out the class colors purple and gold.

Miss Ethel Blackwelder, of Charlotte, spent Wednesday with her aunt, Mrs. R. E. Goble, of Kannapolis.

The Musical Friday Evening.

One of the most brilliant musicals of the season was given Friday evening by Mrs. H. M. Goodman in honor of Miss Ruth McLinn, of New York, who is visiting Miss Constance Cline.

Those taking part were Miss McLinn, Miss Dorothy Wolf, Mrs. H. G. Gibson, Miss Elizabeth Blackwelder, Mr. Sam Goodman. The program began with the playing of Mendelssohn's Concerto in D Minor, played by Miss Dorothy Wolf, who is one of Concord's young and most brilliant pianists. This was followed by two songs by Mrs. Gibson, who charmed her audience with her pleasing style and interpretation. Mr. Goodman then sang a group by Pergolesi and del Rio. Mr. Goodman, who is a pupil of Herbert Witherspoon, has the distinction of being the only North Carolinian who has actually sung leading roles in grand opera outside of his own state. He was accompanied by Miss McLinn, who then played compositions by De Bussey, Paganini, Liszt and Chopin, which showed to advantage her wonderful technic and height of intellectual ability. Miss McLinn is a pupil of H. Bauer, who ranks as one of the best living pianists, as well as a deep student of music.

After the program refreshments were served. About forty guests were present.

Says London Will Be Financial Hub.

New York, June 15.—"London soon will be the financial center of the world again," declared F. G. Hogarth, British banker, arriving today on the S. S. Mauretania. He added that London was about to export capital on a large scale, relieving the congestion in New York. The pound sterling might take five years to reach parity, he thought.

HIS PHILOSOPHY WAS TOOTH FOR A TOOTH

Such was the translation made of writing on the back of a bank book found on the body of a man believed to be Jim Harts Morakis, of Madison, Ga. The body was discovered in a badly decomposed state by the side of a little used road leading out of Columbia, the skull was fractured and a bullet hole through the temple was believed by coroner Scott to have been the cause of death. Local officials say they are certain the man was murdered.

But has Shemwell suffered social ostracism on account of his gunplay? Not a bit of it. He is still a high roller. With an unreserved jail sentence hanging over him, he travels about where he pleases, and none attempts to stop him. The people of Davidson will not prod their county officials into action looking to his apprehension; the people of Buncombe county seem perfectly willing to permit Shemwell to live among them undisturbed; prominent citizens of Guilford county note his arrival in Greensboro on a business trip, and never seem to think of notifying the police. If he were a bootlegger now, innumerable hands would be raised against him; he is only a maukiler, and murder is much better form than bootlegging. A man cannot sell liquor and maintain his standing among gentlemen; but murder—oh, well, that's the fashion, that is regarded as an offence not necessarily involving moral turpitude.

Naturally in that environment murder as a fine art flourishes. Why shouldn't it?

Environment in Which Murder as an Art Flourishes.

A murder record higher than that of any other nation in the civilized world isn't going to be changed merely by enacting laws making it more difficult to procure revolvers and ammunition. Human life, as Hamlet reflected, is at the mercy of "a bare bodkin"; and the only thing that will prevent its wanton destruction is eradication of the murders fashion. Murder must be made distinctly bad form before there will be much chance of stopping it.

That is neither an attempt at satire, nor a strained, humorless joke. It is absolutely seriousness. Our trouble is that murder is the fashionable, conventional thing to do, under certain circumstances; and of course it is useless to undertake to punish the man who does it while public sentiment is with him. It is vestigial survival of the code duello stripped of even those flimsy safeguards with which custom surrounded the court of honor.

For instance, consider the case of the North Carolinian who catches another man in a compromising position with his wife—what does public opinion expect of him? Is he permitted to put his case in the hands of the law, and to depend upon the law, to punish the interloper? Not if he has much regard for his standing in the community. The fashion, good form, commands him to shoot, and shoot for beef. And the dictates of fashion are stronger than any law. No jury will reach any other verdict than one of acquittal in such a case, not even if it is shown beyond dispute that the woman was the responsible party; and the killer receives popular acclaim, instead of a prison sentence.

That is the extreme case, the one in which it is admittedly impossible to convict the slayer. But there are others differing from it in degree, but not in kind, in that the murderously inclined individual is not held in any low esteem on account of his thirst for blood.

A brilliant illustration is the case of Baxter Shemwell, who at one time or another has fired on an incredibly large number of his fellow citizens. Fortunately, Baxter is a notoriously bad marksman, so he has managed to kill only one of his targets; but it has been due to incapability, not to unwillingness.

But has Shemwell suffered social ostracism on account of his gunplay? Not a bit of it. He is still a high roller. With an unreserved jail sentence hanging over him, he travels about where he pleases, and none attempts to stop him. The people of Davidson will not prod their county officials into action looking to his apprehension; the people of Buncombe county seem perfectly willing to permit Shemwell to live among them undisturbed; prominent citizens of Guilford county note his arrival in Greensboro on a business trip, and never seem to think of notifying the police. If he were a bootlegger now, innumerable hands would be raised against him; he is only a maukiler, and murder is much better form than bootlegging. Give Job to Best Man.

Philadelphia Record.

The practice of promoting members of Congressional committees by seniority has resulted in giving a disproportionate number of chairmanships to the South when Democrats are in control, because the South is apt to keep its members in Congress longer than the North and West do. There are persons who think that the Democratic party is injured by this ascendancy of the South in a Democratic Congress. We are not at all sure that this is the case. The civil war has been over 78 years, and the Democratic party is more national, more widely distributed, than the Republican party. But there are obvious objections to the rule of seniority, expressed by Lord Fisher of the British navy in his prediction that "some of these days England will go to smash because it was Buzard's turn." The welfare of the country, and even the welfare of a party, ought not to be risked because it is somebody's turn to take a position of power. The chairmanships had better be given to the ablest men, whether the oldest men or not.
