ROMANCE OF WORDS

"LIEUTENANT"

WHEN, in old English records, we find that the archbishop of Canterbury is referred to as "the lieutenant of the pope and of the king of England" a vision of the church militant immediately presents itself but this use of the word "lieutenant," at once the father and the son of our present-day "lieutenant," is an indication of the earlier significance of the word.

Formed from the French "lieu," place, and "tenant," holding, "lieutenant" means literally one who holds place, or, figuratively, one who exercises authority in the absence of his superior. With its French spelling and its French pronunciation, the word was at first transported bodily across the channel and introduced into England about 1375. But the English in general, and the English lower classes in particular, could not get their tongues around the liquid sound of the first syllable. So they made it over into "leftenant," which is the reason that "leftenant" is the accepted pronunciation of the word in many branches of the British army to this day. On this side of the water, however, the pronunciation has only been slightly Americanized, the "lieu" being altered to "loo" and the word itself being spelled as it was when originally imported into England.

SEASONABLE DISHES

NOW while the mushroom season is here, prepare some catsup for the winter.

Mushroom Catsup.
Break the mushrooms and place in a jar, sprinkling each layer with salt; to one peck of mushrooms use two-thirds of a cupful of salt. Let them stand for two days, stirring occasionally; then rub through a sieve and to each quart of the pulp allow three blades of mace, one tablespoonful of peppercorns, one-half tablespoonful of sliced ginger root, a half-tablespoonful of allspice and more salt if liked. Boil all together for thirty minutes, bottle and seal. If put through a fine sieve, strain out the condiments; the mixture will be more attractive in appearance.

Chutney.
Chop the following ingredients fine, taking the tomatoes by themselves. Six green peppers, from which the seeds and pulp have been removed, twelve sour apples, four onions, one cupful of seeded raisins and eight green tomatoes. Into a quart of vinegar stir two cupfuls of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of dry mustard, two teaspoonfuls of salt; put over the fire and cook five minutes; after the boiling point is reached add the other ingredients and cook over a slow fire for an hour. Put into jars and seal. This is an excellent accompaniment to roast pork or mutton.

Ground Cherry Preserve.
For each pound of the small tomatoes use one-half pound of sugar and one lemon. Remove the husks. Make a sirup with the sugar and just enough water to dissolve it, then skim them out and boil the sirup until thick. Cook the rind of a lemon until tender, add with the juice to the fruit and seal boiling hot.

Uncommon Sense
by JOHN BLAKE

CONTENTMENT

TEACHERS of the past, paid and fed by rulers, preached the joy of contentment. They urged the poor to be content with their lot. They discouraged ambition in the peasant. They besought the common people to remain as they were, and not to aspire to the comfort and luxuries of the rich.

It was an excellent gospel—for the rulers. As long as the bondman was contented, the noble had no fear that the right to plunder would be imperilled. If the peasant could be kept satisfied with a hovel and a pittance there would be less danger that his sons would nourish a dangerous desire to prosper.

Epicurus, the Greek slave whose teachings were all that his master could wish, had no yearning for independence himself, and could not see why it should be craved by others. He said:

"If you were born in Persia, you would not endeavor to live in Greece, but to be happy in the place where you were. Why then, if you were born in poverty, do you yearn to be rich, and not rather happy in the condition where you are?"

And again: "If therefore you acquire a habit of reasoning, you will neither desire riches nor complain of poverty."

Beautiful doctrine, which if faithfully practiced, would have held back the world for centuries.

It is the desire for independence, the desire for better conditions that has brought the human race out of slavery.

Great riches do not bring happiness, it is true. But there can be no happiness without a degree of independence, and the man who is contented with who and what he is, will never be independent.

The poets and philosophers who preach contentment practice it very little. It was their discontent with what they were, that made them what they are.

No thoroughly contented person will ever progress. His contentment will tie him to his present condition forever.

There can be no such thing as contented poverty, for poverty is horrible, and a breeder of horrors. And as long as it exists, no man, whether he suffers it himself, or beholds others suffering it, has the right to be contented.

Do not strive for riches, but strive for independence. And if you find you are getting satisfied with yourself and your condition stop and take your bearings. There is something the matter with you.

PREDICT MACHINES WILL REPLACE HAND LABORERS

Leaders in Foundry Industry See Common Labor Getting Scarcer; Labor Saving Machinery Increasing.

Cleveland, June 14.—A new industrial revolution is going on in America with Americans generally realizing it, according to several leading foundrymen of the country who were here recently to attend the convention of the American Foundrymen's Association, the technical organization of the foundry industry.

The return to prosperity, coupled with the restriction of immigration and the present shortage of labor, is bringing about an overturn in the iron working trade, a change destined to dislodge hand labor in the next ten years and largely to eliminate the old fashioned small foundry in favor of the foundry of mass production, the foundrymen claim.

Leaders in the foundry industry foresee common labor growing more and more scarce; they foresee labor saving machinery developing to degrees never imagined before; the automobile industry calling for greater mass production, and the engineer and trained technician taking the place of the old rule thumb bosses who have managed the foundries for years.

Albert E. Howell, of Somerville, N. J., a newly elected director of the association, predicted that in the new era of the machine in foundry practice, the old fashioned all around mechanic was disappearing.

"Molders and laborers are both very scarce in the east," Mr. Howell said. "Fewer young men are going into molding, partly, I suppose, because their fear their places are likely to be taken by machinery. Foundry workers are becoming specialists, trained to handle special pieces of machinery. The all around man in the foundries is going the same way as the all around man in many another metal working industry."

Wants to Be Commissioner of Agriculture.

Raleigh, N. C., June 14.—T. B. Parker, for a number of years connected with the State Department of Agriculture, tonight announced his candidacy for Commissioner of Agriculture.

"Any person seeking an important office, like that of Commissioner of Agriculture," Mr. Parker stated in his announcement, "should have a definite purpose in view other than simply to run for office. For that reason I announce my platform: Better farming methods, better farm homes and better marketing facilities.

"Better farming methods for the purpose of keeping farming operations up-to-date, reducing the cost of production and adding to the profits. Better homes equipped for the comfort and convenience of the family thereby giving them the pleasure that should go with rural life. Better marketing facilities so as to get the full value for the farm crops sold, all of which will give to the family in the farm homes new visions of real country life and inspire them to higher ideals and aspirations. Upon these depend the future prosperity of our country.

"It will be my desire to bring the State Department of Agriculture into closest co-operation with every agency, state and federal, that has for its purpose the betterment of rural conditions and a more prosperous and successful

Vienna Supports 73,000 Dogs!
(Correspondence of Associated Press.)
Vienna, May 22.—From a census which has just been taken in Vienna it appears that the city has 73,000 dogs, or twice as many as in peace time. At first sight it would seem remarkable that so many people in this poverty-ridden city should be keeping dogs.

One of the principal reasons is the increase in the number of burglaries and thefts, which has led many households to keep dogs for protection. Watchmen with police dogs are employed to guard the great Central cemetery from which a number of bodies have been stolen.
