Stone Age Copper Mine In Canada. A copper mine that was worked by miners of the Stone age has been found on an island near Port Arthur, Ontario. The sharts or pits were 20 to 30 feet deep in the solid rock, and the tools which evidently were used were black, egg-shaped stones of great hardness.—Compressed Air Magazine.

An instance of how trades, callings and professions often run in English families is furnished by the fact that a descendant of the sixth so nof Chippendale, the famous cabinet-maker, who was born more than 200 years ago, is engaged now in the cabinet-making business in the city of Newcastle.

REMINISCENSES.

(By JOHN R. ELKINS.)

I am not going to explode a theory or crack a joke, but if I do not quit delving into the annuals of antiquity for relices, some of my Caberrus friends will probably conclude that I am growing old, too old to claim a sweetheart, but, be that as it may, there is no real cause for alarm among the dear old maids and the sprightly wild wows. Again, while in this dilemma I am sure I can rely upon the aid of my old friend, Prof. J. P. Cook, of the Uplift, who, while I was living in that section of God's country known by him, as the "hindquarters of the globe," made frequent and successful visitations and retired with a prize. Jim is a splendid fellow, always was, and he is performing a mighty good work in teaching those naughty boys in the Training. School how to become good citizens. Sometime, not only the boys, but the multitudes will stand up and say, Prof. Cook, you are a benefactor to the race, May his shadow, though unlike a Juns and never grow less.

Yes, memory carries me back to the time when there was not a railroad near Concord, and the mail and passengers present, and while standing on the plat-form, only a lad I was, the engineer, without consulting me gave a long, loud toot of his whistle and it scared me so much as a bolt of lightning from, a cloudless sky. I nearly fell from the platform and for a few minutes hardly knew which one of the boys I was. This bit of expressioner reminded me of the

The Old Stage Coach.

Yes, memcry carries me back to the time when there was not a railroad near Concord, and the mail and passengers too, were transported across, the country by means of a stage line. The stage was drawn by four horses and fresh horses put in harness every ten miles, until the route was completed. A horn, similar to a threshing horn, was employed in announcing its approach. The Arcys, Albert and Dock, were conducting a general store on Corbin street, and Albert Arey was the postmaster, the first postmaster this scribe ever knew. Here the stage driver delivered the mail and put off and took on passengers. At this time, and on Corbin street, Jas. Willeford also conducted a general store, and Willis Elkins a storehouse and tin shop, and there was quite a lot of business carried on there. The residence of Mrs. John J. Cross was across the street nears by opposite.

The Jesse Hudgins brick store on the corner of Union and Corbin streets, is still intact as I write, not much change in its general appearance.

The N. C. Raifroad. for many years sould us a beacon light to the wears-worn religious traveller, was torn down a few years ago. To me that is a hallowed spot as in my infancy and early boyhood days, I was taught the principles of our holy religion by a fond father and other devoted friends, all of whom have long since crossed the rive. of whom have long since crossed the river to "rest under the shade of the trees." And the following poetical stanzas so fitting describe this subject that I conclude this article with

> I love thy Church, O God, Her walls before Thee stand; Dear as an apple of Thine eye, And graven on Thy hand

For her my prayers ascend To her my toils and cares be given Til toils and cares shall end!
