to erect an orphanage. That does not prevent him from violating the law when he solicits for the orphanage, for the State Board of Charity and Public Welfare has never given him permission to conduct an orphanage and until such a permit is issued any one soliciting for the proposed institution violates the law.

People are too gullible, Miss Shotwell stated, and she is right. Anyone with a long face, a broken or missing limb can come along and get money from almost anyone. It is the same with people who go around claiming they are collecting for rescue work or an orphanage. The aver citizen has a tender spot in his heart for the orphan or the boy or girl who has gone wrong, and without giving the case the attention it deserves, he goes ahead and pays out money. In most cases the beggar needs no public help, and in many instances the money given orphanage or rescue home goes ne pockets of slick solicitors. to the pockets of slick solicitors.

When these beggars and solicitors of around, whether they be seeking aid for themselves or some alleged institution. city officials should make an investiga-tion. The department with which Miss Shotwell is associated keeps tab on worthy institutions and many worthy indi-viduals who really need aid, and if the department says the cause for which themen are soliciting is worthwhile, then the fund seekers should be allowed to work in a city. Otherwise they should not be permitted to operate.

PRESIDENT BOASTFUL.

President Harding has had no hesitancy in claiming all good things for his administration in the speeches he has made in his swing through the west. The President has always been particular not to call the trip a political visit to those States which have shown strong Democratic tendencies recently, but we fail to see how it can be called anything else. In practically every speech he has made he has devoted the great part of his talk to a defense or rather an enlogy to the accomplishments of the government nuder his administration. He wants the Republican nomination next year and he is bidding high for it.

His utterances about what the administration has done for the farmers is typical. He claimed it all, when everyone knows a farm bloc, together with the Democrate in the Senate, forced through all legislation that got through. The Edministration leaders opposed practically President Harding has had no hesi

Mothers of Famous Men

The Mother of Sam Houston.

When one knows what sort of mother was the mother of Sam Houston he understands how it came about that Sam Houston was the intrepid ploneer, the builder up of the great southwest, the man whose name is honored in the city of Houston, Texas.

Sam Houston was a man who feared no one. The mother of Sam Houston was a woman feared no one. Her, muiden name was Elizabeth Paxton. One had only to look at her to know her, character. She was a woman of strong museles, of great size, and of most determined ways. When her husband died an left her with six sons and three daughters, she made no appeal to the public for help. Instead of that, she harnessed up the oxen and set off into the wilderness. She crossed the Allegheny Mountains, and made her way into Tennessee. There she set herself and her children at work, and cleared land, meanwhile keeping a watchful eye on the the prowling Indians—for Tennessee in those Tennessee. There she set herself and her children at work, and cleared land, meanwhile keeping a watchful eye on the prowling Indians—for Tennessee in those days was a frontier place. She built herself a cabin, and proceeded to make herself, at home. Sam Houston was then a boy of thirteen. All this made a deep impression on him.

There was one woman in the world for whom ke had the utmost respect, and that woman was his mother. He thought: "If I can be a man half way equal in spirit to my mother. I'll be a great man." He set himself that ideal, and out of that ideal he made himself the great pioneer, the builder of a great ection of the United States. Every one loved his mother; for all found her worthy of respect. Her big Irish heart went out in sympathy to every one who was in trouble. As some one said: "She was twice the man that almost any one of her men neighbors was." When history speaks of the grit of Sam Houston it ought to speak of that heroic mother of his! America has had few women to equal her.
