CLAIRE

CLAIRE was originally a masculine name. Generally spelled Clare, it was first used in England to name a Norman family who came from one of the villages of St. Clair. "Red De Clare," stout Gloucester's earl, the foe of Henry III, was one of them.

The son of Red De Clare married into the House of Genaldin in Ireland received from Edward I, a grant of lands, now known as County Clare. His heiress carried the county to the De Burghs and their heiress married Lionel, son of Edward III, thus making the county a dukedom and creat-ing the title, the duke of Clarence.

The feminine form is said to have arisen in Italy as Chiara and spread into France where it was immediately changed into Claire. Though prefer-ring the original Clare, the English ac-cepted Claire and it gained some vogue there, but in this country it was adopted with enthusiasm and has undergone widespread usage.

The diamond is Claire's talismanic jewel. It promises her brilliant at tainments, magnetism, and courage Saturday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number.

Measurine the Bride.

London, July 14.—An old and quaint eremony has just been observed at Roylon, in Norfolk. About three hundred carrs ago the Lord of the Manor bequeathed the sum of $5,000, the interest of which was to be voted annually to provide dowries for four brides. Under he terms of the bequest the money has o be divided among the youngest, the ddest, the shortest, and the fallest brides unjug the course of each vear in the page. uring the course of each year in the

After the marriage ceremony the bride and the bridegroom proceed to the vestry to sign the register, and the bride is then measured by the officiating minister. Once each year the marriage records are examined and the dowries awarded to those qualified to receive them.

Rockefeller Returns to Boyhood Home.
Moravia, N. Y., July 12.—John D.
Rockefeller, who passed his eighty-fourth year on Sunday, visited today the scenes of his boyhood and passed out several hundred new dimes to old friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Rockefeller arrived about noon, registered at the village tavern, told the clerk he would be back for dimer and then motored to the old Rockefeller home between this village and Auburn. He walked about the old place, chatted about the days of his youth and recalled, friends said, that while living in the ancient wooden house he carned his first dollar.

Mr. Rockefeller talked with farmers ahout their crops and the outlook, and on, returning to this village resumed handshaking and passed out dimes. He was the center of a throng on the steps of the old Moravia, house.

He appeared in excellent spirits:

TEXT—and I said unto them, if ye think good, give me my price; and if not forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.—Zech. 11:12.

The context clearly shows that the and that the pric here determined constituted a de liberate and care ful estimate of His value, for it was weighed. The prophetic fulfillment of this passage is seen in the betrayal or Jesus to the Jew ish rulers by Ju enanted with him for thirty pieces of

On a certain occasion Jesus silenced His enemies, the Pharisees and Sad-ducees by the question: "What think ye of Christ?" That is, what is your estimate of Him? At what do you ap-praise Him? Is He worth nothing or everything to you? everything to you?

One of the great saints of the church aid: "We do not value Him at all, unless we value Him above all." Measured by this yardstick, what is your measure? What prospect have you of getting through in the face of God's declaration, "That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent Him."

To set a price upon Christ is inevi-To set a price upon Christ is inevi-table. Pilate vainly sought to evade this responsibility, and for all we know, is spending his eternity in futile efforts to wash his hands of the blood of the One of whose condemnation to death he publicly declared himself in-

All the issues of our dealings with All the issues of our dealings with Christ are fraught with eternal consequences. Whether our attitude be one of mere neglect, cool indifference, deliberate rejection, or bitter opposition, we set a price on His head. And God will hold every one who is accountable and rational, responsible for their attitude toward His Son. This Judas discovered to his complete undoing when he essayed to return the thirty when he essayed to return the thirty pleces of silver to the high priests.
Their reply to his remorseful confession, "I have betrayed the innocent blood," was like a death knell to his hope of retrieving his fatal mistake—"What is that to us, see thou to that."

It is of more than passing interest to note that His appraisers were the highest representatives of His nation, of its social and intellectual standards, and of the greatest religious system of the day; viz., Judaism. Those who should have estemed Him work black should have esteemed Him most high ly seemed to value Him the least. But this is no less than the Master ex-pected, for He warned His disciples that a man's enemies shall be they of his own household. Nevertheless, it does not relieve the shock of finding that your familiars and your bene-ficiaries have lifted up the heel against you. This truly is the most unkind cut of all. When Julius Caesar recog-nized Brutus, his one-time friend and companion, among his conspirators and assassins, he felt the hurt of his stab more than the others and ex-claimed "et tu Brutus!" (And you, Brutus!) So Christ said, "Judas, be-trayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss." that a man's enemies shall be they of

By every rule of common gratitude the Lord's people, along with every institution of the social order and of learning, should set the highest price on the head of Christ; for He is the author and patron of every worthwhile benefit our modern civilization has to bestow. If this is doubted, compare the civilization of the originature of the civilization of the originature of the civilization of the originature. has to bestow. If this is doubted, com-pare the civilization of the Orient with that of the Occident and just one per-son accounts for the difference— Christ; and just one system of infu-ence is responsible for it—Christianity. How unspeakably unjust then was this price, when viewed in the light of His service for mankind; and yet the prevailing disposition is to undersett. prevailing disposition is to underesti-mate the value of God's love and grace, of both which He is the perfect embodiment. It no longer seems wonderful that God loves us, that Christ died to save us, and that through His death and resurrection all the treas-ures of His grace are opened for our inheritance.

Dear reader, will you per ask a very personal question in clos-ing? At the beginning of this New Year, what is your estimate of Christ? If you were faced with the actual al-ternative, Christ or the world with its

By SENATOR N. B. DIAL, of South Carolina, Speech in Congre

I do not know what there is in the atmosphere of Washington to pro duce that effect, but when legislators come here they seem to forget the trials and the hardships of life; we seem to think that money is just simply printed by the printing presses of the government, with nothing behind it, and that all senators and representatives have to do it to introduce a bill to appropriate money.

I intend to take a new start, and hereafter to oppose the creation of all unnecessary offices and all unnecessary taxation.

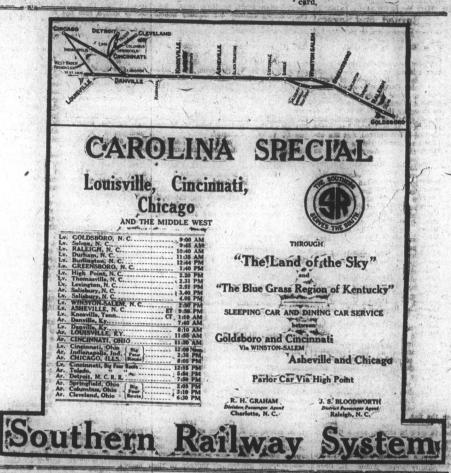

I do not want to warn my fellow senators; that is a matter for them but I do say that the people back at home are more aroused than they have ever been about the extravagance of government. I am sorry to say that one can hardly get in a Pullman car or enter a hotel lobby without hearing the expression, "To h-l with congress; its members are antiquated; congress is out of date; it is not in harmony with the people."
