ence now discovers a system of stars, more wonderful than the Pleiades, becaus so minute. "You may raise over every atom of the earth's dust the fore the throne, 'Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty'."

What a rebute is this conception of science to that the science to that science to that false view of God, which makes Him incapable of paying attention to the minute things of the attention to the minute things of the world and of life. Verily, He is the God of the telescope, yea, of the microscope, also. And the scripture is in harmony with the findings of science when it says, "I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me" (Psa. 40:17). Our text suggests this thought of God's care for the individual, for "the elder," who is the Apostle John addresses himself in the Apostle John, addresses himself in this portion of Holy Writ to "the elect lady," rather than to some group of men or women.

The wonder of this simple inscrip tion is increased when we keep in mind the sex of the recipient of the letter. An Oriental is astonished to find that two books of our Bible, Ruth and Esther, bear the names of women. Even more astonishing is it to find this second epistle of John, a canonical hook of Scripture, to consist of the let-ter of an apostle to a Christian lady and her children. The status of women in heathen lands is well known. We have heard of the Chinaman who placed over a pond the inscription, "Please do not drown girls here."

A God of the Fatherless.

It is surmised that the "elect lady" was a widow. Her children are mer tioned, but not her husband. Ther tioned, but not her husband. There seems to be a purpose in wishing for her "mercy" from "tiod the Father" (v. 3). We are reminded of the spirit of consideration in the early church for those who were "widows indeed"—a spirit which abides in the church even to this day. See years are Eather Taylor, as he was called, ministered in the Seaman's Bethel in Boston. While uneducated in the schools, he was marvelously gifted. Practically Gety visitor to Boston went to hear him preach, Challes Dickens being among the number, On one occasion a sallor's widow, clad in mourning, followed by her five fatherless children, lowed by her five fatherless children came down the aisle as the service be-gan and took seats at the front of the chapel. Father Taylor was greatly chapel. Father Taylor was greatly moved at the sight and began his prayer by saying: "Oh, Lord, we are, this morning, a widow and five children." There was stirring in his heart the same compassion which stirred in the breast of the Apostle John, and which was born in the heart of Him who bids us "visit the fatherless and widows in their affection."

widows in their affiction."

We do not know the name of this matron, but she was "elect" in the sense that she was an eminent saint. Yet she evidently had something to do besides being religious, for she had brought up children. An old writer has well said: "A woman is of great use as a Christian, who walks with meekness of wisdom along the com-manplace ways of life, loving her hus-band and training her children in the Lord." It is not difficult to persuade women to aftend meetings and devote women to attend meetings and devote time to various kindly activities; but It is important to persuade them that Divine service begins at home, and that the patient and affectionate dis-charge of maternal and domestic duty is acceptable and beautiful in the sight of the Lord.

Report Shere Bathers Get an Ear Affection.

South Norwalk, Conn., July 21—An ear infection, fatal in one case, had appeared among bathers in this locality this summer. So general is the trouble becoming, especially among those who dive or go under water, that the doctors have advised putting cotton in the ears to keep out the water.

The fatal case occurred at Harbor View, a summer colony, where William A. Miller, 12 years old, of Brooklyn, was taken first with mastoditis, which developed into meningitis.
