WILSON SPEAKS.

there are few who do not recognize a man of keen intellect, a man ws of what he is talking. There fore his article in the Atlantic Monthly-for August on "The Road Rway From Revolution" will be read with interest persons in every part of the world, of every political faith.

"Our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually." This, he says, "is the final chalorganization and to mur capitalists—to every one who fears God or loves his country."

In other words, Mr. Wilson is preaching against selfishness. And he gets at the root of the thing when he tries to catch the public eye (brough means of re interested in making mo so he warns that if we would continue as prosperous nation, we must take greatand deeper interest in the well-bein our neighbors.

Mr. Wilson speaks not as a radical, but as a man of rare judgment, a man of conservative disposition, and a man who has made a deep study of present day We would do well to heed

ROCKEFELLER'S MISTAKE.

While John D. Rockefeller is nothing human, even if immensely rich. there are perhaps many people who feel that the oil magnate never made a very serious mistake. It is but human to err, to be sure, but Mr. Rockefeller has been unusually successful as a business have never made a serious mistake. But he did, and we have his own word for it, and there are many people making the ame mistake today.

"Next to doing a thing right," Mr.
Rockefeller says, "the most important factor in the success of any business is the telling of people what you are doing. one regret is that I did not learn fundamental of success earlier in

People are be ginning to learn that the way to estab-lish confidence is by being perfectly frank. Steadily and rapidly is the print-ed wrid, prime disseminator of infor-mation, increasing the faith of man in mankind and improving his condition in the world the world.

When Governor Lee M. Russell was sued recently by a young woman who preferred serious charges against him, he had the sympathy of the general public, we believe. But now again serious charges are preferred against him, informally to be sure, and he is not receiving such support as he received in the other case. As his time of office expires, he takes up the contemptible practice of treeing all prisoners in the State prison. He opens the doors of the printer, and turns loose upon the people of his State who elected him in good faith, many of the criminals they had sent there for, their protection. Such action should inever be taken, we think, and power to take such action should not be given to one man. There are many instances, to be sure, when the Chief Executive of a State exercises in the highest form the powers given him, but there

DEAF PERSONS AND THEIR EMPLOYMENT

Head of Bureau for the Deaf Tells of Some Interesting Cases.
Raleigh, July 26.—"We are running across some very interesting deaf persons in our employment work," said J. M. Robertson, head of the Bureau for a the Deaf of the Department of Labor and Printing. "One of the most unusual of these is that of a deaf mute employed as billing clerk and stenographer for a tobacco concern at Danville My.

"This fellow attended the North Carolina school for the Deaf at Morganton, almost a helpless boy with a blg hump on his back. The older he got, the big ger the hump became. He bent down, his bands almost touching his feet. This deformity, together with his deafness was a great handicap.

"He was determined not to allow himself to be dependent upon charity, the searched many months for work and at last found employment with a tobacco manufacturer at Danville. He has worked hard and has made good. We have just received a letter from his employer telling us what he thinks of this deaf muite."

The letter from the manager of the tobacco company is as follows:
"Heary has been in my employ since 1914. I found him at that time working in a tobacco factory of which I assumed management. He was pasting revenue stamps and labels on smoking tobacco, making $1.00 per day when at work. I do not suppose we operated that department more than half the time. Consequently he had to get assistance from relatives.
"He was very auxious to work full."

Spencer, July 26.—The Southern is operating what is called "the grass burner" on several divisions of the road. The outfit is said to consist of a huge fank of steam, super heated and then heated by the use of an oil burner. The machine is attached to a locomotive and the steam is discharged with great force in a spray reaching some 50 feet on either side of the rightsof-way along the main line, killing instantly all vegetation along the roadside. So hot is the steam that it is said to kill even large bushes without actually touching the steam. It is said the oufit can make about five miles per hour doing the work of several hundred men, effecting a great saving in labor and money.

It has been observed that there are some people in the State who consider themselves too good to obey the law, and scorn to stop at the crossing. Nevertheless, they exercise the caution of slowing down and looking each way before going on. It is due to this circumstance that a 100 per cent record in crossing safety has been established since the stop law went into effect. It is not because every driver of an outomobile has stopped at the crossing, but because every driver has been moved to caution, that the railroads have been enabled to pass out word of a casualtycaution, that the railroads have been enabled to pass out word of a casualty-less record since the law went into effect. The stop law is doing good in spite of the few who think they are better than the law.

Mothers of Famous Men

The Mother of William H. Prescott.

"She had a perfect spirit of self-sacrifice," wrote the American historian, William H. Prescott, concerning his mother. "She was sympathetic. She had a heart full of loye."

The woman of whom he wrote lived to see her son fifty-six years of age, honoried in his own country and even beyond it. In all those years she rejoiced in having his deepest love and respect. There is something exceedingly great about motherhood, for it can command the deathless love of great men. whose minds are turned to the most serious work. It can make men who are notable for thought and for keenness of perception look upon their mothers as ideals of all perfection. A mother, therefore, gains a throne such as no queen could command, save through the power of motherhood alone.

Catherine Hickling Prescott was an unusual woman. She was very fond of reading, and delighted especially in reading Shakespeare. The Bible, of course, she knew almost by heart. Then, too, she made miny attempts to write. This love of reading, and this desire to find expression in authorship, and their influence on her son. She was a woman of remarkable energy, tireless in carrying on her own work, in visiting those who were sick or unfortunate, and in giving service wherever she could find need for it.

William H.a Prescott was the oldest of her seven children, and he inherited her love of books, of writing, and her intense energy. When he took up the work of writing his great histories of Mexico and of Peru he was as tireless as she had been. Her pride in him was well founded. He carried out to the full all her own longings.
