THE SPIRIT OF AMERICA.

Various facts in connection with the quieting influence on Senator Mangus Johnson, of Minnesota, who just before the President died, was preaching a doc-trine of threatened revolution. The great homage paid by the American people to Mrs. Harding and her dead husband should show Senator Johnson and his

How can there be a revolution against a government when there is such a spir-it abroad as was shown in the United States when Mr. Harding, head of this government, died? If there are people who are dissatisfied to such an extent that they are a menace to the government in that they are powerful enough to start a revolution, as Senator Johnon predicted, where have they been durthe past several days? The fact is, ple are loyal, as shown by their spirit of sacrifice and devotion demonstrated when they stood for hours in a broiling sun, a drenching shower or in the stillness of the night to catch a glimpse of the train which carried their dead President to Washington. They could do nothing physically to stifle the sorrow in the heart of Mrs. Harding, but they did everything humanly possible to lighten her burden by offering silent prayers and making physical sacrifice to demon to her their loyalty to her hus-

And they did no more for Mr. Harding than they would have done for any other President. He was popular with the people, owing to his strong personality and great love for the people, but homage was paid to him as the President of the United States. He was the principle figure in the government of the United States, He held the highest of-fice any man can hold in the United States, the greatest of all nations, and people of every rank and file, of every political party and every creed, felt a personal loss in his death. In the solid South as well as the conservative east and the changing west, memorial services have been held by people who wanted to pay homage to their President.

So long as such a spirit as this pre vails in the United States, we are in no danger of a revolution, regardless of the teachings of Senator Mangus Johnson and his kind.

THE REAL TROUBLE.

William Allen White, who has made a long study of conditions affecting the farmer of the west, several days ago wrote an editorial in which he declared the real grievance of the western farm er is transportation. And isn't Mr. White

In his editorial, part of which was opied by The New York Times, Mr. copied by The New York Times, Mr. Whife pointed out that when the west-ern farmer buys steel, he pays for it on a Pittsburgh-plus basis. That is to say, he pays the Pittsburgh price plus the freight charges from the Pennsylvania steel center. And in many instances the steel he purchases has never seen the Pennsylvania city at any stages of its manufacture. Yet, he must pay the "plus."

When the same farmer sells his wheat, he must sell it on the Minneapolis-minus basis. The price which he obtains is the prevailing Manneapolis price minus the freight charges that must be insuited in shipping his wheat to Minneapolis.

His came is very similar to the day of "Heade-I-Win-tales-you-lose."

When he sells, he pays the freight charges. When he buys he pays the freight charges.

BUSINESS AND THE OUTLOOK.

BUSINESS AND THE OUTLOOK.

Philadelphia Record.

The death of President Harding and the accession to the Presidency of Vice President Coolidge cannot be said to have influenced the general business situation. Leading fininciers have expressed such entire confidencein present conditions that in New York they disalation that in New York they disalation any banking necessity of "coming to the support of the market," notwith standing the continued liquidation which to some has seemed to portend developments of importance. The report of the Steel Corporation for the second quarter of the year, as interpreted by Chairman Gary, was favorable for the remainder of the year. The commerce failures in July were fewer in number than any month since November, 1920 and in totals were less than any other month, except June, for a period of twe and one-half years. Reports to the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia show increased wholesale and retail trade, with such depletion of stock as will require renewals. There is no such bidding for labor against each other on the part of industries as to compel extensive wage advances in many quarters.

The Government cotton report, while not as favorable as had been expected, indicates a substantial yield. Dun's review of trade says: "The price of the raw material advanced on this news and some indications as to the future of cotton, purchasing in large volume in many departments of trade dependent on cotton is assured. The effect of the curtailment in employments largely ir cotton goods lines, in iron and allied industries, particularly in the former due almost entirely to the instability of cotton prices."

The midsummer steel market con tinues dull, without recession in prices It is medications as to the future of cotton prices."

The midsummer steel market continues dull, without recession in prices. It is predicted that this will come probably slightly, as an inducement for September buying. The tinplate milh have been pressed by makers of packerscans and heavy deliveries have been required for the present canning sensor. While there has been an apparent scarcity of tinplate, the production is owell sold up that prices or premium inducement would not likely add to the offerings. It is likely in the circumstances that tinplate production for the current year will make a new record by a slight margin.

Curtailment cotton goods production should show Senator Johnson and his cotton goods production is reaching followers the utter folly of their doc-larger proportions, due to the unwilling ness of mills to take business at the prices now prevailing, which they say compels operation at a loss.

The opening of the women's wear woolens by the American Woolen Company last Tuesday was an important event for the trade. The small advances of next spring prices over the fall quotations brought about good buying and increased stabilization. Mill buying of raw wool is reported to be negligible, with the result that, with the exception of the finest wools, much lower prices prevail than a week ago. Wool importers are quoted as saying that they expected to see further depreciation of wool values.

Predictions are made that a sharp decline in spring wheat and a slight drop in corn will come with the publication of the Government crop report next Wednesday. The week closed lower, with September wheat 96¾ a96¾. December 1.00¼ to 1.00%; corn, September 76¾. December 63¼.

Jim Atkins is publisher of the Gassonia, N. C. It is doubtless if there is a city in the country that has a champion in the art of superlawties and verbal illustrations developed to the legree exhibited by Atkins in his address before the North Carolina Press Association at its recent meeting in Blowing Rock. It seems that Mr. Atkins was a pagainst the keenest kind of competition, and before an audience which was a colimated to the boosting atmosphere, but after he had scintilated around a few minutes between heaven and earth, and the state of the Greenville News; submits that any man who can do what Atkins did is entitled to the undisputed championship without further discussion.
