The afternoon was spent in a social manner. After a pleasant day, friends and relatives departed showering this happy "young" couple with congratulations and good wishes.

ONE PRESENT:

Party This Afternoon.

A social event of more than usual interest is the party being given this afternoon by Mrs. W. M. Linker and Mrs. J. B. Womble, at the home of Mrs. Linker, for Miss Jessie Willeford, who next month will become the bride of Mr. J. Lee Crowell, Jr.

About 200 invitations were issued by Mrs. Linker and Mrs. Womble. The hours for the party are from four-thirty to six-thirty.

Miss Margaret Peele Entertains.
Little Miss Margaret Peele entertained a number of her friends Monday afternoon from four to six o'clock at her home on North Church street celebrating her ninth birthday.

The time was happily spent playing games. The children were assisted by Miss Janie Kluttz. They were then invited to the dining room, where a big cake, with its lighted candles awaited them. The little hostess was promised a party next year if she blew the nine candle lights out with one blow. She extinguished all but one. The cake was then cut and served to the little guests with ice cream aplenty.

Those enjoying fer hospitality, were Misses Gertrude Ross, Jean Verburg, Hudlow Hill, Martha Sapp, Nancy Linker, Hesietta Rowan, Grace McDonald, Masters Eugene Kidd and Grady Black.

An Unimpressionable Secretary.

Sir: unimpressed is what I am every time I read of the loads and loads of litter that litter up our literary men's desks. And unimpressed is what I was when I read your comment, on President Coolidge's desk. You say "he has a secretary." And pray tell, why shouldn't you have a secretary?

I am a secretary?

I am a secretary. I am an unusual secretary. And I know I'd love to work for a colyum conductor. I have a sneaky feeling any colyum conductor would appreciate me. And why? Because I have a mania for speed. 'To illustrate: At 9 o'clock Monday morning you get a letter from a shirt manufacturer asking for your size. You read the letter and sigh. You lay the letter on top of the "litter." Nonchalantly I pick up said letter. I glance through it critically, ask a few well-directed questions, pick up the telephone, and at 10 o'clock you are wearing a size 14 1-2, 33-inch sleeve length, pure linen shirt.

I am available at once.

HEPSIBAH CLEMENTINA.

HEPSIBAH CLEMENTINA.

No, Hepzibah—for possibly that is how ou meant to spell it—we don't want a scretary. She might have a mania for secretary. She might have a mania for speed, such as you say you have, but, if her speed interfered with her control, as yours does, she would be more trouble than she would be worth. Before your letter went to the composing room, we had to make one correstion in punctuation and one in spelling. How then, could you correct proofs for us? How could you make up the column? How would you know which letters to throw away? And you—or any other secretary—would you know which letters to throw away? And you—or any other secretary—would argue. You'd say, "I think you ought to print that," or "That isn't good enough." And where would you go at 9:55 that morning, while we were trying on the new linen shirt?

Two Lives Saved; Two Tempers Lost.

A stout, determined-looking man greached the station just as the train was pulling out. He ran down the platform, seized the handrail of a coach and was about to hop aboard when some one clutched him by the coat tail. It was a brakeman, very angry and blustering.

"There, I've saved your fife," the brakeman said. "Don't every try to hop a train when she's in motion!"

Then as the train continued to gather speed the brakeman skillfully swung himself on the steps of the last coach; but the stout man caught his coat and plucked him off like a ripe peach.

"You saved my life," said the stout man, grianing. "Allow me to save yours."

And the train disappeared round the signed.

Arriving in Raleigh, Barrett was placed at first base, a position he had never filled before. The youngster played well at the initial cushion, and since that time, with the exception of two games in which he caught on account of the regular backstopped being out on injuries, he has played first base. After performing at the sack for about two weeks the sports writers are almost unanimous in the opinion that he is among the best-looking prospects for higher company seen in the season.

Before going to Savannah, where he played three years, "Jumbo" played on the Seventh District Agricultural and Mechanical school nine at Power Springs (a., as an outfielder and catcher, Kellar Hasty, now a member of the Philadelphia Athletics, was his battery mate during the school days.

Barrett's home is in Rockhart, Ga. He is 24 years old, weighs 194 pounds and stands five feet, 11 inches. He bats and throws right-handed. Arriving in Raleigh, Barrett was placthrows right-handed.

According to unofficial figures, Baritet holds the record for the longest hit ever recorded. A drive he made in a series with High Point August 7 sailed over the centerfield sign boards, coming down just inside the outside fence of the park. After the game the sports editor of a local paper, accompanied by two witnesses, measured the distance the sphere was hit, and, according to their measurement, the ball sailed 503 feet, two inches on the fly, beating "Babe" Ruth's longest drive of 495 feet.

The Brother of a Poet.

The poet John Greenleaf Whittier, writes a contributor, had a brother, Matthew Franklin Whittier, who was nearly five years younger than himself. When at an early age the poet had begun to make a reputation Mrs. Whiter wondered whether her younger boy also might not have literary talent; so she talked with "Frank," as he often was called, and asked him if he was sure that the could not write poetry. Matwas called, and asked him if he was sure that the could not write poetry. Matthew Franklin was quite sure there was no "spark of genius in his make-up, but he said that he was willing to try to write something if his mother would furnish a subject. That most helpful mother, Abzigail Hussey Whittier, did her part, and we give below the subject and the result of the effort:

Danlel in the Lion's Den
They took old Daniel by the heels
And boldly threw him in;
And all the lions then
Began—to—grin.

Began—to—grin.
But Daniel mustered stoutly up;
His courage did not fail;
He cuffed the lions on their ears

He cuffed the lions on their ears
And pulled them by their tails.
The good mother did not call the attempt successful, but it is true that later in life at the time of the Civil Warthis brother of a poet, wrote a number of humorous letters for the press over the signature "Ethan Spike of Hornby," satirizing the doings of the proslavery politicians.

187 the Associated Fress.)
Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 21.—Coming to the Raleigh Club of the Piedmont League from the semi-pro ranks of Savannah, Ga., Virgil W. Barrett, better known as "Jumbo" Barrett, is now being heralded by sports writers throughout the Branch and noe of the most dangerous hitters in the league, although until three weeks ago, when he joined the local club, he had never played professional baseball.

Barrett has been attracting the attention of several big league scouts by his mighty hitting, the last league average giving him a percentage of 364, which included 14 extra base wallops, five homorans, six triples and five doubles.

"Jumbo" until recently performed on the Scaboard shops nine of the Savannah league, playing outfield. While there he had the reputation of being one of the heaviest hitters in the league.

Both of the regular hurlers on this club were in the hospital list one day and the manager asked if any other member of the club could pitch. "Jumbo" voluntered his services and won the game. Two days later he repeated. The officials of the Raleigh club, who were in the market for pitchers, received word of Barrett's ability as a hurler from a person who had seen him work in those two games. The Georgian immediately was signed.

Arriving in Raleigh, Barrett was placed at first base, a position he had never filled before. The youngeter played well side of the counter of the count
