Prohibition Hastened Harding's Death, Ex-Gov. Sproul Declares in London

By Wireless to The New York Times, London, Aug. 28.—Prohibition hastened the death of President Harding, in the opinion of ex-Governor Sproul, of Pennsylvania, who said today, in discussing prohibition in an interview in The Evening Star.

"I think President Harding's death was accelerated by the fact that he thought it his duty, because of prohibition, to set a public example and abstain from the use of liquor. He was accustomed to take an occasional drink of Scotch whisky.

"I am his personal friend, and I know, and in that laborious trip to Alaska I'm sure he missed it."

Washington, Aug. 28.—Confirmation of the declaration by ex-Governor Sproul in London that President Harding thought it his duty, because of prohibition, to set a public example by abstaining from the use of intoxicants, was given tonight in a statement obtained from an intimate personal friend of Mr. Harding.

This friend asserted that, while he did not agree with the theory that prohibition hastened Mr. Harding's death, it was true that Mr. Harding had not touched any intoxicating beverage since the delivery of his Denver speech on June 25th last on law enforcement. The President, said this friend, had decided to live up to the principles on which his Denver speech was founded and "practice what he preached."

"I do not take any stock in the theory of Governor Sproul that prohibition hastened the end of President Harding," declared this friend, "and I regret that Governor Sproul has seen fit to discuss the subject in London; but it is true that President Harding had practically abstained from the use of liquor in recent months, and that he had not touched an intoxicant as a beverage since the delivery of his June 25th speech at Denver."

"The late President Harding was never much of a drinker," continued this friend, "but it is true that he liked an occasional Scotch. During the last few months of his life he drank very little, and I do know that he told an intimate friend on the Henderson on his way back to the states from Alaska, that he had never taken a drink since the date of the delivery of his Denver law enforcement speech. To this friend, the late President declared that he had made up his mind to 'make good' on his Denver speech, and that was so."

Mr. Harding was on his way to Alaska when, in his Denver speech, he pledged dry enforcement by the Federal government and hit at the stand taken by Governor Smith of New York on the State dry law repeal bill.

"I do not see how any citizen who cherishes the protection of the law in organized society may feel himself secure when he, himself, is the example of contempt for the law," Mr. Harding declared.

Another statement in the Denver speech was that "reverence and obedience must spring from the influential and the leaders among men, as well as obedience from the humble citizen, or else the temple will collapse."

In another part of his speech, Mr. Harding asserted that "the resentful millions have the example of law defiance by those who can afford to buy and are reckless enough to take the risk, and there is incited a contempt for law which may, some day, find expression in far more serious form. It is the partial indulgence which challenges the majesty of the law, but the greater crime is that of the impairment of the moral fibre of the republic."

JODE MORGAN HELD

Is Returned to Albemarle Jail Without Privilege of Bail.

Albemarle Press, 29th.

Yesterday morning, the recorder's court, before Judge R. R. Ingram, had as its chief case for trial that of State vs. Jode Morgan, charged with the murder of Olan Huneycutt on Sunday, August 12th, on the highway leading to Stanfield.

The first witness for the State was young Tise Morgan, who is a first cousin of Jode Morgan. Young Morgan testified that he was with Olan Huneycutt on the day in question, walking. They wanted to ride, and remarked they wished a car would come by. About that time, Jode Morgan drove up and stopped, the witness raising his hand, and asking if they might ride with him to Stanfield. Jode said: "You may ride with me; I have a crow to pick with Olan."

It seems that Jode Morgan was accused of writing some libelous matter to friends of Huneycutt, and he said to Olan that he would take him to the parties to whom he was accused of writing, and clear the matter up. Olan said to have remarked, "I don't ask you to do this." Words followed, and threats of drawing blood were said to have been advanced by Morgan. As the Press gathers it, Huneycutt was informed by other parties that Morgan had written or made the libelous statements against him to some lady friend, and that he showed his displeasure. Jode Morgan resented the charge, and denied that he had any part in them.

According to Tise Morgan, when the parties met on the road, Jode Morgan got out of his car from the left side and made a kick at Huneycutt and missed him. That Huneycutt struck at Morgan with his right hand and missed him. Cross-examination developed the statement that Huneycutt held a knife in his left hand, but did not use it. Morgan climbed into his car from the left, got out on right side, advanced to the front and shot Huneycutt when within about five feet of him.

Mrs. John Morgan testified that Tise Morgan was at her home on Sunday of the accident before and after dinner. She is the mother of Tise Morgan. On her return to her home, Jode remarked that he was going after Olan. "That one or the other of them would wake up in h— before morning. Said that Jode was in his shirt sleeves, and that he carried a pistol. Attorneys for the defense drew her out, and it was shown that all parties involved were at her home that day, and that there was no unusual display of bad feeling between Jode and Olan.

The defense offered to place witnesses on the stand if trial judge would consider allowing prisoner to give bail. Judge Ingram thought this was beyond his jurisdiction in the matter, and after consideration of the evidence presented, he ordered that prisoner be remanded to jail until next term of court.

Just what line of defense will be followed is only conjecture at this stage of the trial. Huneycutt had a knife. He was angry at Morgan for alleged slander, and no doubt made statements which would be brought into evidence, which had a tendency to make Morgan feel that he had to be on the lookout. Did Morgan at the time of shooting Huneycutt consider that the latter was about to use his knife in attacking him? These things are only suggested by the cross-examination of State witnesses by the defense.

Globe Doesn't Turn, It Just Shimmies, Scientists Assert

London, Aug. 30.—This old globe of ours is not rotating as a rigid body in the heavens, but it is behaving as if it were a jelly-like substance, and some parts of its surface are moving relatively to other parts. This startling suggestion is put forward by Prof. W. de Sitter of the University of Leyden, in Nature.

According to the professor it would follow that the distance between various points on its surface is shifting slightly. Wireless time-signals exchanged between various observatories have shown discrepancies, reaching on occasions several tenths of a second.

Similar fluctuations in recent years have been observed on the surface of the moon; in fact, something queer is happening in the solar system, because even the sun seems to have been infected by the new astronomical complaint.

You'll find it difficult to make your life if you have no difficulty in making excuses.

Partial Eclipse of Sun Scheduled September 10th.

A partial eclipse of the sun will be visible in this part of the country on the afternoon of Monday, September 10th, according to press reports, when the sun will enter the shadow at 3:36 o'clock. The eclipse will be at its zenith at 4:43 o'clock, when it will cover about seven-tenths of the sun's surface, after which it will gradually diminish.

As the earth causes the eclipse of the moon, so the moon causes the eclipse of the sun by coming in between the earth and the sun, and cutting off a portion of the solar rays. This eclipse of next month will be a total eclipse to observers in lower California, the Pacific ocean and Yucatan.
