There Is No Condemnation

By REV. JOHN G. PAGE
Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago
TEXT—"There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus."—Romans 8:1.

Mountain climbing is a difficult task, but the returns for labor expended are rich and satisfying. The higher one ascends, the more beautiful becomes the vision. When the top of the mountain is reached a scene of such splendor usually opens before the eye that the soul is overwhelmed with the greatness and grandeur of mountain and river and plain, as they unfold themselves in their vast reaches. The opening words of the eighth chapter of Romans brings us to the top of the mountain of Christian truth from which the believer looks out over the vast stretches of God's grace, and cries out exultantly: "There is now no condemnation." Condemnation is the result of guilt, of unrighteousness, of a corrupt nature, and the sense of powerlessness to attain one's ideal. If these four limiting perplexing, cumbersome conditions which are attached to all human life in a greater or less degree could be removed, the sense of condemnation would be removed. Now this is precisely what God has done. First, He has removed our guilt. "I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions and as a cloud thy sins return unto Me for I have redeemed thee." If the question of method be raised, "If we ask how is this accom-plished, the words of John 1:29 and Hebrews 9:26 will supply the answer: "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." "He ap-peared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." "In that sacrificial death, He met and settled forever everything involved in our sinning. "He died, the just for the unjust." In view of that death and by virtue of it, the divine proclamation in Acts 13:38 is made: "Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by Him all that believe are justified from all things." Guilt is removed through the vicarious atonement of the Son of God. To the end of time this truth will be assailed with objections, but as long as the world stands, the awkward conscience will turn to it as the one and only appointed "city of refuge." In the second place, righteousness is imputed to the believer in Christ. With all our self-righteousness, there is a sense of condemnation because of its insufficiency. The soul instinctively feels this. After one has done the best he can, there is this sense of in-adequacy and incompleteness, a feeling of shortcoming, and a conviction that our own righteousness is not valid be-fore God even though it stands the scrutiny of man. "All things are naked and open before the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." Motive as well as action is seen by our God. Under such conditions, and standing on one's own merits, it is impossible to say: "There is therefore now no condemna-tion." But Christ is made unto us righteousness. He not only removes our guilt but reckons over to our ac-count that divine righteousness which by His life and death He wrought out for us. It is as Luther said: "Lord Jesus, I am thy sin, thou art my right-ousness." Imputed righteousness is clearly taught in the Bible. In one chapter, Romans 4, the word "imputed" or "reckoned" is used eleven times in this connection. "Abraham believed God and it was reckoned to Him for righteousness." Abraham is the norm or standard in this matter. A divine righteousness is provided in the gospel and reckoned over to the account of those who believe that gospel. On the basis of this imputed righteousness, in addition to the removal of guilt, one may with increased emphasis affirm: "There is therefore now no condemna-tion." In the third place, a new life is im-parted. Those to whom a divine right-ousness is imputed, are made the recipients of the divine life. In other words, when we are justified by Christ, we are also united to Christ in a spiritual, vital and vitalizing union. As the branch is in the vine, so are we in Christ. To be in Christ implies that the life of Christ is in us. The one is the complement of the other. In the fourth place, power is pro-vided. Condemnation may result from powerlessness as well as from guilt. The "wretched man" of Romans 7:24 cries out for power rather than for cleansing. He longs for deliverance from the dominion of the old nature. His need at this point is fully met, even as it is in every other respect. "The spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Power is provided, even the power of the Holy Spirit who is "The Spirit of life in Christ Jesus." In view of this four-fold provision, the soul triumphantly exclaims: "There is therefore now no condem-nation to them that are in Christ Jesus," for guilt is removed, righteous-ness is imputed, life is imparted, and power is provided. This is indeed a great salvation!
