Kerr Street Baptist Revival. The revival started in reality Tuesday night. God just came down in such power that the devil was driven away. There was a noise of a mighty rushing wind that filled the house and it carried the mind back to Pentecost. God's power was in the singing in such a way that it seemed that everyone present was moved. The junior choir did some fine singing and it seemed that God moved upon the whole congregation in song. There was a larger congregation present to greet the singers and preacher Tuesday night. The preacher spoke from Matthew 27:46, and made a strong appeal to those who had turned their back on God. He said in part:

The world has a very poor opinion of a quitter. Paul would not take Mark with him on his second missionary tour because Mark turned back on the first tour. But all men admire a sticker on the one who is faithful. Why have you turned back? What did God do to you to make you mad? Listen to the text, "Why hast thou forsaken me?"

First. Some turn away because things don't go just as they think they should in the church. Jesus said, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." But things don't go just as Jesus would have them go at all times.

Second. Then some turn away because other professed Christians don't treat them as they think they should. Look how the professed Christians treated Jesus; even His disciples forsook him and fled.

Third. Some turn away because of temptation. Look at Jesus in the wilderness. Listen: "I am that God's word says that He will not suffer us to be tempted more than we are able to bear."

Fourth. Some turn away because of persecutions. They persecuted Jesus and He said that they would persecute us.

Fifth. Then a large number turn away because of bad company, leaving bad company. Shun evil companions, bad language, disdain; God's name held in reverence; nor take it in vain.

Sixth. Then some turn away because of the allurements of the world.

Service tonight at 7:30. Come and worship with us.

Re-Location of Highway Not Worrying Hickory. Sept. 18.—Persons owning property along the present highway of Lenoir are not much concerned over a survey made by the engineers that would leave the main road at the corporation limits, strike across country and cross the Catawba River just below the Carolina and Northwestern Railroad bridge. The distance would not be materially shortened by the new survey. It is declared, and in addition another bridge would be required. Unless the Southern Power Company was willing to put up the new bridge there would be no advantage to the state in making the change, it is asserted. Proposed power developments a few miles north of Hickory might alter the conditions that now obtain.

This picture is produced with flawless attention to detail. It is beautiful, refined, exciting, presents a powerful story enacted by a strong supporting cast including Julia Swayne Gordon, Robert Frazer, Ralph Kellard, Lila Peck.

The picture will be run at the Piedmont Theatre today and tomorrow.

MARVELS OF THE SOYA BEAN.

People Generally Do Not Appreciate Its Great Value to Humanity. Madison, Wis., Sept. 18.—The annual meeting of the American Soya Bean Society, which has just been held here, attracted little attention from the general public, yet it dealt with a subject the importance of which can scarcely be over-estimated. The purpose of the society, as its name indicates, is to promote the cultivation and use of the soya bean in America.

The soya bean is a native of Manchuria and its wonderful properties were first made known to the outside world a few years ago by English scientists. It happened that one day a German horticulturist called at the office of the Royal Botanical Society in London, with news of a marvelous plant he had discovered in far-off Manchuria. The plant was known as the soya bean. Asked if he would supply the Royal Botanical Society with some seeds of the new plant in the interests of scientific research the German refused, although he agreed to send some empty pods.

When the pods arrived they were placed in the society's museum. On day the curator happened to be re-labeling the exhibits, when he noticed in the pods some beans not larger than a pin's head. He took them home, thirteen in all, and planted them in his own garden, nurturing them as tenderly as if they were worth untold wealth. As a result of his care and foresight the soya bean has come into its own as one of the most valuable plants known to science.

England now imports thousands of tons of these wonderful beans every month. A considerable portion is made into a special kind of bread, which is said to have met with high favor throughout great Britain, while the bean is also taking its place as an ingredient in many other kinds of food, including cheese, a new brand of milk, cakes and confectionery.

The soya bean has to be acclimatized—a fairly long process, involving almost inexhaustible patience and care. So far it has not been found possible to grow it on an extensive scale in Britain, but much better success has been met with in America. The bean is now being cultivated in several sections of this country, after much patient research and the expenditure of a vast amount of time and trouble in selecting the right strain of soya bean that leads itself to growth in this climate. There are many varieties of soya from which to choose, and scientists say that there is no reason why one should not be found to suit virtually every section of the United States and Canada.

In its native Manchuria the soya bean has been grown for more than five thousand years. In that country the yield is nearly one hundred bushels to the acre, from an original sowing of a half bushel of seed. Over and above this, the plant yields green food as valuable as the best clover, at the rate of four tons or more to the acre. In growth not unlike a smaller edition of the ordinary broad bean, the soya plant is capable of producing thousands of seeds, as many as forty bushels being grown to the acre.

Bread made from the soya bean is said to contain all the best elements of both meat and milk. In China the priests dry the "cream" of the beans after they have been boiled and store it for use as a winter food. It is claimed that a man could live entirely upon the product of the bean, and experiments are being carried out by scientists with the object of proving this.

Of Time-Killing. "Ennui is the ghost of murdered time," says a modern epigrammatist. And this reminds us of a wile line of Young's: "If trifling kills, then view must butcher time."

His Forgetfulness. Absent-Minded Professor (falling down an elevator shaft)—Dear me, forgot to close the door after meeting California Pelican.

A boy in Augusta, Ga., is reported to have done a business of $20,000 last year in selling worms to fishermen.

Where would we be anyway if it weren't for advertising?

What a lot of time advertising saves us! We need something. We see it advertised. And we go straight from where we are now to where the article is sold.

Have you ever gone around from place to place seeking for something which you knew existed but which nobody else seemed to know anything about, not even the storekeepers?

You have wasted an hour, maybe several hours, possibly half a day. You have worn out your patience, and before the end of the quest probably you began to figure that the thing you sought was not, after all, so good as you thought it was, otherwise the people besides yourself would know something about it.

The manufacturer who advertises, invests his money, therefore, not alone to tell of the merits of his goods, but to save you time. The manufacturer who is willing to pay for advertising space in newspapers or magazines in order to point out to you where his merchandise is sold, so that you may get there quicker and buy it easier, is not going to skimp or cheat in manufacturing it.

After going to all the trouble and expense of telling you just where you may find it, he is going to see to it that when you do buy it, it is good enough so that you will buy it again.

And in making up your mind about merchandise which is advertised, consider this last thought—the manufacturer can well afford to make it as good as it can be made because one sale means hundreds, even thousands of others following naturally and costing him nothing extra.
