

CONVICT ESCAPES BY JUMPING FROM TRAIN
 The men were captured recently in Kentucky and were again en route to Raleigh to enter the penitentiary in custody of a Macon county deputy sheriff when one of the brothers broke a window and leaped from the train. The deputy continued in the same train to Raleigh with his other prisoner. The local police were notified of the escape, but did not learn the name of the brother who made his escape, while en route to the state prison, neither the name of the officer in charge of the train. Volley Weaver was sentenced to six years for larceny and his brother to four years for a similar offense.

Perhaps Four Chief Qualities Among the English-Speaking Peoples

By SIDNEY BALDWIN, British Premier.

THE common civilization which we all inherited is that old civilization of western Europe, which for seventeen centuries has been built up through the blood and tears of generations of men, of saints and soldiers, kings and statesmen, and we are seeing that civilization cracking today. The whole world, consciously or unconsciously, not vocally, none the less in reality, is looking for salvation from the subject of this toast, "The British Empire and the United States."

There may perhaps be four chief qualities, persistent, consistent, among the English-speaking people. They have alike, from long inheritance, an innate sense of justice. Secondly, there is that real democratic feeling of valuing a man for what he is. There is, thirdly, that sense of political freedom, neither degenerated on the one side to license nor on the other hand retrograding into tyranny. Lastly, there is the love of spiritual freedom, a belief that men in the English speaking races can worship in their own form and their own manner.

I believe in those four things you have the fundamental principles that guide all our people alike. You have that consistent product of the stock which gives us, in my belief, that strength of character that gives people a feeling that we can be trusted, that we are a support of serving to the world.

It always seems to me that what is true of individuals is true to a great extent of nations and groups of nations. I believe that in the true course of progress we shall, all of us—the nations in our empire and the United States—in our several ways, each pursuing our own development to the uttermost of our power, come to unite wherever justice calls us throughout the world and wherever there is peace to be insured.

If there is building up to do in the world it is we in the long run who will have to do that building, and whether the time is come now, or whether it is in the future, let every one of us here cherish at least that ideal in the firm conviction that sooner or later opportunity will be given to us for its realization. But for the men who have to lay their hands to that task they will want the courage of a Pitt and the faith of a Lincoln.

Europe Now Wants Not Judicial Intervention but Partisan Intervention

By REPRESENTATIVE T. E. BURTON, of Ohio.

AM I an optimist in world politics? No—and yes. I am sure many grave difficulties must be overcome before we can have international confidence and peace. Europe is in a deplorable condition. Doubtless it yearns for a settled political and social order as ardently as any people can; doubtless its public thought and purpose are moving on as high a plane as the circumstances make possible, but it is full of trouble, and its every path toward general accommodation seems blocked. Its diversities are indescribable, its suspicions obstinate, its antipathies almost fathomless. One scarcely can descry a clear European horizon; in every direction are massed clouds and ceaseless lightning play.

Think of Europe's innumerable and fixed segregations. Physically and psychologically it has memories of nothing but segregation. Mountains, rivers and seas fight against peace in Europe. They keep peoples apart. They perpetuate hatreds. In their work of prolonging human division they are aided by differing degrees of civilization, by antagonistic racial impulses, by discordant religions and by a babel of tongues. Add to these physical and mental barriers and disparities the numberless intractabilities common to all human nature and you have a problem that will may dishearten the most hopeful and resolute of statesmen.

But the situation cannot rest here. Humanity must advance. Evolution will not be denied. Intellectual and moral forces are gathering strength, peoples are traveling, frontiers are wearing down, education is spreading, international understanding, though slow-paced, is on the march.

Europe just now does not want judicial intervention; it wants partisan intervention. Each of the great protagonists looks to us, not for disinterested guidance, but for helpful sympathy with itself. We cannot take sides among these contestants. It would be necessary for us to oppose somebody, and whomsoever we opposed we should offend. In all likelihood we merely should add another element to the welter of jarring judgments and embittered emotions. Possibly the conditions will change and offer us an opening for useful mediation or aid. Our most responsible public men at Washington are on the bridge, so to speak, for such a sign.

No Civilization Lasts Long Unless the People Are Trained to Their Tasks

By PROF. M. V. O'SHEA, University of Wisconsin.

The conditions in city life have changed markedly during the last few decades. The individual home has been constantly losing its distinctive character. Fifty years ago, even in the city, young and old spent a considerable part of their time in their own homes. Today most of their time is spent outside of their homes; and even when they are in their own homes, their friends are there with them.

The agencies in the city designed to help people to while away their time have been constantly increasing out of all proportion to an increase in the size of the cities. This simply means that people are spending much more of their time together in groups than they did formerly.

The tendency of this new life is to make young people more responsive, more alert, more self-reliant in the presence of others, perhaps even "smarter" than was true in the old order. But at the same time, young people do not have training outside of the school in long-continued application to any task. No civilization can long endure unless the people are trained to apply themselves to their tasks, whatever they may be, for a long time; that is to say, until the tasks are solved.

HOMETOLKS FINANCER SUPERB HOTEL AS WAVE OF CIVIC PRIDE HITS TOWN

First it was considered a huge joke, a colossal bit of drollery, this notion of Bedford building the finest hotel in America.

"It can't be done," shouted backward citizens.

"It will be done!" thundered the business men. And thereupon a campaign committee was formed. Flushed with civic pride the workers whirled into the task and in one week the half million dollar hotel had been financed by popular subscription. The unique achievement gave Bedford what is claimed to be the finest 100-room hotel in America. It stands today a challenge to the civic pride of all towns that want things but haven't the courage to get them.

Bedford, a prosperous town of fourteen thousand, nestles on the Dixie highway in a district of gently rolling hills, midway between Indianapolis and Louisville. It is a stop-over point for motorists. The town is also in the heart of the famous Indiana limestone quarries, which furnish 30 per cent of all the building stone used in the United States. Thousands journey there each year to purchase stone and to inspect the quarries. It was to properly care for the growing number of transients that the civic drive for the new hotel was started. The new Greystone, operated by D. J. Landers, financier, and J. R. Dignan, former Chicago hotel man, is built of Indiana limestone. The interior is a study in quiet elegance, and the delicious cuisine would make any Paris chef turn green with envy.

"They said it couldn't be done and we did it," laughed the chairman, as the campaign workers finished their job. "In America civic pride means national progress."

Former Governor Harvey South Carolina

What did the Governor of North Carolina say to the Governor of South Carolina?

GOVERNOR MORRISON—"This is a great co-operative movement that will be a tremendous asset to every manufacturer and individual in our great states. It is the duty of every one of us to add power to it."

Former GOVERNOR HARVEY—"South Carolina joins her sister state in this annual show window of our progress and industrial development. Between us we can go far and accomplish much."

GOVERNOR McLEOD—"I am in hearty sympathy with the prospect. It will open up a vast avenue of information for other states and our own people regarding our industries and products. It has my best wishes and hearty support."

Made In Carolinas Exposition

Charlotte, N. C. — Sept. 24-Oct. 6

3,000 Carolina-Made Products in One Great Big Beautiful Display

The chief aim of this Exposition is to acquaint the people of the Carolinas with the wide diversity of Carolina-Made-Products.

You'll see displayed all under one roof—two floors 300 feet long—hundreds of things which you never dreamed were made in the Carolinas. The Made-in-Carolinas Exposition is sometimes called the "show window of the Carolinas"—but it's more than that, it's a big educational event so full of thrills that no one can afford to miss it.

Too Youthful a Pet.
 Uncle Dick sent Mary a puppy for her birthday. But the new pet soon proved very troublesome to the neighbors, digging up flower seed and carrying off laundry from the yard. After hearing many complaints Mary became discouraged and she sighed hopelessly, "I do wish uncle had sent an adult dog."

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN OUT SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation. Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.
