MISS NELLIE HARRY TO WED CHARLOTTE MAN THIS MONTH

Engagement Announced Saturday at a Beautiful Party Given Here by Miss Elizabeth Black.

The engagement of Miss Nellie Harrie Harry, of this county, and Mr. Louis Orr Stephens, of Charlotte, was announced at a beautiful party given here Saturday afternoon by Miss Elizabeth Black at her home on North Spring Street.

The guests present at the announcement party were: Miss Harry, Miss Martha Caldwell, Misses Annis and Virginia Smoot, Mrs. B. E. Harris, Jr., Miss Elizabeth Harris, Miss Bertie Louise Willeford, Mrs. Lee Crowell, Jr., Miss Elizabeth Dick, Mrs. R. V. Caldwell, Jr., Mrs. W. D. Harry, of Concord, Miss Adeline Hinson, Miss Laurie Downing, Miss Mary Cochran and Miss Elizabeth Wearn, of Charlotte.

Miss Harry wore a frock of peach-bloom georgette, with a corsage of sunset roses.

While the guests were enjoying a salad course after the game was over, little Miss Sara Davis brought in beautiful corsages which she presented to the guests. Attached to the stems were cards bearing the following inscription: "N. B. H. and L. O. S. October 23, 1923. Miss Harry was presented with a handsome bride book."

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Harry and Mr. Stephens will be of cordial social interest in Concord, Charlotte and throughout the state, and their wedding a notable event of the coming month.

Miss Harry is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Harry. She graduated from the North Carolina College for Women, at Greensboro, and took a post-graduate course at Columbia University, New York City. She is a strikingly pretty brunette, bright and charming, and has a host of friends throughout the state.

Mr. Stephens is the younger son of the late Alex S. Stephens and Mrs. Stephens, and was born and reared in Charlotte. During the world war he saw a year's service overseas with the 316th field artillery, 81st division. For the past six years he has been connected with the Charlotte branch of the Ford Motor Company, and holds the important position of head of the production department. He is a young man of splendid business ability and genial personality, and commands many friends.

Mrs. Harris Entertains. One of the most elaborate parties of the present season was the bridge party given Saturday morning by Mrs. B. E. Harris, Jr., honoring Miss Elizabeth Harris, who will be wedded this month to Mr. Stanton Northrup, and Miss Charlie Huss, of Gastonia.

The home of Mrs. Harris was beautifully and tastefully decorated with a charming variety of cut flowers, which gave an added beauty to the home.

Following play by twenty guests, Mrs. Harris served an elaborate luncheon to the players and other invited guests who came after play. Those present for the luncheon were: Mrs. K. E. Caldwell, Mrs. Leslia Bell, Mrs. Edward Sauvain, Mrs. C. J. Harris, Mrs. Robert Jones, Mrs. B. E. Harris, Mrs. J. M. Odell, and Misses Margaret Virginia Ervin, Elizabeth Smith, Ruth Crowell, Lucy Richmond, Lenz, Miriam Morris, Frances Ridenhour, Margaret Bell, Adele and Mary Phifer Pemberton and Helen Marsh.

Miss Margaret Bell won top score prize and Mrs. Harris presented gifts to the honor guests.

First Fall Meeting of Woman's Club. The Concord Woman's Club will hold its first meeting of the Fall, on Thursday afternoon, October 4th, promptly at 4 o'clock at Central Graded School. The president of the club, Mrs. W. H. Gorman will preside. Several matters of importance will be discussed. All members and especially all new members are invited to be present. Several musical numbers will be rendered, which will give much pleasure.

MRS. G. B. LEWIS, Treasurer.

LLOYD GEORGE'S PASSION FOR READING

Spends Great Part of Each Day Reading Newspapers and Books

London, Sept. 29.—No inconsiderable part of the luggage which Mr. Lloyd George is taking with him when he sails today to begin his long-anticipated visit to the United States and Canada consists of several large parcels of books and the latest issues of British and Continental magazines, with which the former Premier expects to beguile the time during the voyage across the Atlantic. Without something to read, Lloyd George would be a miserable man.

Throughout his career he has been an inveterate reader. No matter what the crisis—and his life has been full of crises—he seldom has failed to spend several hours of each day in reading official papers, newspapers, or books.

Unlike Earl Balfour, who once confessed that he did not read newspapers, Mr. Lloyd George has a passion for them. He is always anxious to buy papers. If he hears a newsboy crying out the headlines in the streets he must buy a paper. Newspapers of all classes and of all shades of political opinion appear to be of equal interest to him. Indeed, he is as ardent a collector for news as some men are for racing results.

During his long tenure in the premiership, 7 o'clock in the morning found him looking through the newspapers, while the evening papers he read almost as soon as they arrive. He delights in a celebrated court trial just as much as the ordinary individual, taking the keenest interest in the manner in which the cases are conducted by the opposing counsel. He likes to point out what the counsel might have said and what he did not say, or how well the counsel put his case, or how skillfully the witness evaded the searching question. He has an added interest in such matters, no doubt, from the fact that the law was his own profession.

Whether in or out of office, he has made it a practice to read all important political speeches. He likes to criticize the speaker's methods and discriminate between the good and the bad passages.

Papers of all sorts—religious, secular, and literary—interest him, except the technical journals. He has never yet been seen studying the pages of an automobile journal or any other of the so-called class publications.

With regard to books, Lloyd George always has several at hand—nowadays usually novels. Historical novels are his favorites, and he has almost the passion of a schoolboy for tales of adventure and daring, his favorite character in fiction being Alan Breck, the hero of "Kidnapped," which he has read many times.

As to novels, "The Cloister and the Hearth," he admits to having read six or eight times in the course of his life. He thinks it one of the most wonderful novels ever written. His favorite novelists are Dickens, Scott, Dumas, Conan Doyle, Robert Louis Stevenson, Bulwer Lytton, Mayne Reid, Charles Reade, Fenimore Cooper, Mary Johnston, Jack London, Kipling, Stanley Weyman, and other similarly vivid writers.

Apart from novels he has no favorite books, except perhaps Macaulay's "Essays"—one of the first books he read as a boy. Stories of great battles, history, travel, and biography interest him largely, while, although generally speaking, he takes no delight in English verse, he still loves to read Shakespeare.

His knowledge of the Bible is far more detailed than that of any other book, which is no doubt due to his early training and environment. A real lover of sermons, he likes to read them as well as hear them, and is said to have remarked that he would rather have been a great preacher than prime minister.

Goff, Taken at Hickory, is Carried to Raleigh. Hickory, Sept. 29.—John G. Goff, state convict, charged with attacking an aged white woman near Spruce Pine, was arrested by Burke county officers near Hickory late this afternoon and on orders of Superintendent Busbee, was sent tonight to Raleigh in charge of City Manager Ballew and Assistant Police Chief Sigmon.

Goff was eating crackers and cheese when the Burke officers found him about two miles east of town.

Goff, according to Chief of Police Lentz, denied attempting to assault the white woman, but admitted luring her from the house in order to steal a pair of shoes.

The convict had ridden into Hickory on a local freight train, he said, and was making his way eastward.

News of the arrest and start to Raleigh was not generally known here until tonight. No excitement was caused.
