LOVE AND ROMANCE

By CORONA REMINGTON

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

IT'S dreadful not to be the least bit in love; not even to have anything hanging around to fall in love with, and to see everywhere couples looking at each other with that how-I-adore-you, darling-how-could-I-live-without-you expression on their faces. Everybody had somebody—except Violette Ramsdale.

Then came John Hodges. He walked into her life as easily and unexpectedly as well, as most lovers do.

"And so your name is Violette? May I use it?" he asked as they parted.

A perplexed little expression chased itself across Miss Ramsdale's face. "I—I'm glad you like it," she said after a moment. "Yes, you may call me that."

Hodges took her, here, there and everywhere. Each evening they were together and often lunch time found them seated across the table from each other in some quiet little restaurant. He wooed her impetuously, sent her flowers and brought her candy.

"You're so good to me," she said gratefully one evening as he was rising to go.

"How could any one help being good to you?" he asked. "You're so—so absolutely adorable."

Violette flushed and trembled. He was going to propose, she knew. What should she say? What should she do?

"Violette, I—I love you."

He was drawing her into his arms, his eyes looked big and almost startled, so close to hers. "You lovely thing," he said reverently, kissing her.

It was over, the experience of her life, the one for which she had been waiting so long. She had been wooed and won—and kissed. That night, after he had gone and she had retired, she stared at the dark ceiling and lived over the blissful evening. She didn't want to go to sleep. How could she for a moment even endure the idea of shutting out all those thrilling memories with sleep? Sleep was for those who were bored and unhappy.

Then, in going over his every word for the fortieth time it occurred to her that, after all, he had not really proposed, that is, he had not actually said the words, but of course he meant it; did he mean it? The rest of the night was not so pleasant, and by the time she finally fell asleep she was glad that she had only let him have two little kisses.

The next morning she was decidedly uneasy, and she remembered now a slight feeling, not exactly of mistrust, but perhaps more a feeling of not complete trust; that she had always had when she was with him. But it was so sweet to be loved, and she had been so lonely.

"What makes you so quiet and solemn today?" asked her employer, Jim Foster. "You don't seem a bit like your happy little self."

Violette flushed and looked down at her typewriter. "I don't believe it's anything," she said shakily.

"Well, if you need any help or advice, Violette, remember Jim Foster's right here."

She flashed him a grateful look and turned to the jangling telephone.

"This is John, darling," came the voice over the wire. "I'm so sorry I have a business engagement and can't get down to take you to lunch today. So, so sorry, dear."

So she went alone at noon and chanced to go to a dainty little tearoom a few blocks down the street. She would not go to any of her favorite haunts. It would make her feel all the lonelier. She had been sitting there a few minutes when she recognized the back in front of her as John's own well-tailored back. He was leaning across the table, talking to a pretty girl.

"You know I love you," she heard him say in a low tone, and in her horrified mind Violette could see his eyes glowing as they had when he had kissed her the night before. She jumped up and hurried out of the tearoom unobserved.

"Why, what's the matter, Violette?" her employer asked as she rushed into the office. "You haven't been gone ten minutes and you look as if you'd seen a ghost."

"Oh, nothing, nothing nothing!" she wailed, bursting into tears.

"Well, there's only one place for you to cry, and that's right here."

He held her quietly in his arms and stroked her soft hair.

"You know," he was saying gently, "you need a man like me to shoulder your woes, and when you are tired of running around with that he-vamp I'm going to propose to you, dear. I've been watching you, though, and I believe in letting a girl have it out. Sooner or later you'll find out he's not the kind for you, else I'm very much mistaken in him or you."

It was not romantic, this second proposal of hers, but it was so comfortable and safe and good.

"In through," she answered meekly a moment later. "I've found out, but I would have had to have that first experience to be able to appreciate you. I know now there's a big difference between love and romance. There's some love that's romance, but there's a whole lot of romance that isn't love."

"Right you are, but ours shall be both," he promised, happily.

RELATIVE PURCHASING POWER OF FARM PRODUCTS

In 1923 Was 72 Per Cent. of Their Value Ten Years Ago.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 2.—Supplementing the recent statement of an official of the United States Department of Agriculture that the difficulty with the farmer is that he is not getting a fair share of the national income, that the purchasing power of his products is not what it should be, W. H. Rhodes, assistant statistician of the co-operative crop reporting service of the State-Federal Department of Agriculture, today issued a statement giving the relative purchasing power of farm products and other commodities.

"Taking the relationship between prices, at the farm, of farm products, and wholesale prices of non-agricultural products," read Mr. Rhodes' statement, "we find that in July, 1923, the purchasing power of farm products expressed in terms of other products was 72 per cent. of its value ten years ago (1913). In July, 1922, this was 69 per cent. This figure reached its lowest point between these two dates in September, 1922, when it was 64 per cent."

Compared with July, 1913, ten years ago, the prices of farm products in July, 1923, were as follows: Cotton, 169 per cent.; corn, 147; Wheat, 107; hay, 108; potatoes, 191; beef cattle, 97; hogs, 89; eggs, 119; butter, 135; and wool 229 per cent. The present trend of cotton, wheat, beef cattle, butter and wool is towards a lower average, while that of corn, hay, potatoes, hogs and eggs is higher than that shown for July. The combined average of farm products included, is 151 per cent. The latter has shown a movement downward since a year ago.

The lack of proper co-ordination between the farmer and his markets was attributed by Mr. Rhodes as the cause of his receiving unequal returns for his products. "The inability of an industry to obtain co-ordination between its supply and the public demand," he said, "usually places the burden of loss on the producer of the raw product."

BULLETS THROUGH A WALL

KILL A MAN IN NEXT ROOM

Fired to Stop a Noisy Party and Slayer Surrenders Himself.

York, Pa., Sept. 30.—Oscar Greep, 24 years old, was shot and killed at Spring Grove last night by Leroy Turner, who, angered by a disturbance which occurred in a room adjoining the one occupied by himself and wife, sent three bullets through the board partition separating the two rooms. Turner surrendered himself to Constable Shue and was committed to jail. The men are negroes.

The shooting occurred shortly before midnight. Turner was disturbed by the noise made by a drinking and card party, he claims, and after he had requested that the noise cease, his wife being in a delicate condition, he fired. He is employed by William Strauts, of Philadelphia, on a State road contract. Both he and Green came here from Virginia.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.
