Haynes Launches a New Campaign Against "Home Brew."
Washington, Oct. 19.—Prohibition Commissioner Haynes has launched upon a new campaign against home-brew. In order to stamp out what he characterized as "the menace" of trafficking in home-brew ingredients, the commissioner announced today that he would revoke the permits of all brewers which continue the practice of making malt syrups, now widely used as a base for home-made beer.

All breweries will be notified, said Mr. Haynes to "cease the manufacture of such syrups at once, and failure to do so will result in prompt citation and revocation of their permits to manufacture cereal beverages.

The Demon, Circumstance

By REV. J. E. RALSTON, D. D.
Secretary of Correspondence Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. * * * And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go to bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.—Luke 9:59-61.

Circumstance in life counts for more than most believe. When circumstance is against man it is a demon; when it is for man it is an angel. In the text circumstance was a demon, for it brought about the greatest injury to the persons involved.

Two men were invited to follow Jesus. Both virtually refused, one saying that he wished to first bury his father, and the other that he wished to go home and bid his family farewell. In both cases it was a circumstance in life that forbade the acceptance of the invitation. As circumstance often leads to disaster it is suggested that there is some element in the circumstance itself, or in some personality back of the circumstance, that makes it an enemy of the person. In both of these cases the circumstances were against the best interests of the persons involved, and suggest malevolence which is always a demon's characteristic. In contrast with this malevolence we note the gracious and loving manner of the Master towards the recipient of His invitation.

Satan probably used the best weapon at hand. As we not only have these two cases, but also the excuses offered in Luke 14, we may with fairness come to the conclusion that Satan uses circumstances very frequently and with great success to prevent the acceptance of the gospel invitation.

The difficulty of most persons when considering the gospel invitation is their failure to properly value the better things. One of the reasons why such invitations are not accepted is that the blessings connected with them are of the future, and are moral and spiritual rather than material. It is not difficult to show reasonable people that the blessings of the Christian religion are of infinitely more value than the blessings promised by Indulgence in sin. But with the people of the world "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

The matter of circumstance dominates most persons. When asked the reason why one fails in the performance of anything, the answer is often a preventing circumstance: "I was handicapped because my parents did not give me a good education"; "I was not properly supported"; "Those with whom I was working were incompetent and indifferent."

That the chief end of man is the pursuit of happiness, is to be commended, but the commendation is qualified by a consideration of the source of happiness. To have good health, to have convenient and luxurious homes, to have money to satisfy every demand for travel, dress or amusement, to be popular with all classes of people, means happiness to most men. The demon, circumstance, or the devil, who is behind the circumstance, succeeds in making this interpretation of happiness almost universal, but though successful in keeping his victim under his control, he cannot produce the merry heart, cover the face with smiles or give the satisfaction and peace that belong to the inner being. The brightness and sunshine of life come from within, not from the things that are without. The merriest heart belongs oftentimes to the person who seems to lack all the favorable circumstances of life.

The saddest thing about circumstance is that it has power to keep men and women from accepting the gospel invitation. The plans in favor of accepting Jesus Christ as Savior are often fully acknowledged, the heart is looking in the right direction, but when the act of rising to follow Jesus Christ is proposed, the circumstance of family duties, or social obligations, or a dozen other circumstances, prevents the acceptance of the invitation.

Need All of Christ.
"I can do all things in Christ! The tragic fact is that many people use the first two words and leave out the last two. They say 'I can,' and then omit 'in Christ,' and they speedily faint in their labors. They rely upon will and not upon grace, they depend on self and not on Christ, and they break their backs and their hearts in impossible tasks. If only we know it, and if only we would practice it, we should find that the last two words provide the secret of the first two. It is 'in Christ' that 'I can.' Indeed, dropping all mechanical illustrations, it might be best to find in the Apostle's sentence the figure of a living tree, of which 'in Christ' is the root and 'I can' is the fruit. Divine grace blossoms and fructifies in all human ability, and the pleasure of the Lord prospers in our hands."

Mistake Often Made.
Joy comes after peace. Righteousness is the root; peace is the stem; joy is the blossom. The mistake so often made in the search for happiness is that people want to put joy before righteousness and peace.

Hoover Says Business on Fairly Stable Basis.
Washington, Oct. 19.—American business conditions appear to be on a fairly stable basis, Secretary Hoover declared today, except for the existence of two sore spots of these, he said, is due to the depressed price for grain in the west, while the second he described as resulting from the international unsettledness involved in the German-French struggle.

"Notwithstanding, the area in which stability exists is much greater so far as the United States is concerned," the commerce secretary concluded, "that which is affected by either German conditions or the western grain raisers' plight."
