UP TO VOTERS NOW

Elections Are to Be Held Tomorrow in Many States.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 5.—Elections will be held tomorrow in many states and cities throughout the country. Three states will elect governors and other state officers, namely: Kentucky, Maryland and Mississippi. In the last named the election will be purely perfunctory, as the successful candidates in the Democratic primary will be elected without opposition.

In the Maryland election Governor Albert C. Ritchie is a candidate to succeed himself on the Democratic ticket. Opposed to him as the Republican standard-bearer is Alexander Armstrong, the present state attorney general. In the contest for the governorship and other state officers in Maryland, and especially in the choice of a legislature, the question of prohibition enforcement figures as a leading issue.

The campaign in Kentucky has been waged almost wholly on local issues. The opposing candidates for the governorship are William J. Fields, Democrat, and Charles I. Dawson, Republican. Mr. Fields, who is a present representative in Congress, was chosen to head the state ticket after the death of Congressman James C. Cantrill, who was the regular nominee for governor on the Democratic ticket.

One vacancy in the United States Senate and more than half a dozen in the House of Representatives will be filled in the elections tomorrow. The Senate seat vacant is that formerly occupied by the late William P. Dillingham, Republican, of Vermont. The opposing candidates for the place are former Representative Porter H. Dale, Republican, and Park H. Pollard, a first cousin of President Coolidge but a Democrat.

In the national House of Representatives there are four vacancies in the New York delegation and one each in the Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina and Vermont delegations. In the last election Democrats were returned in all of these districts except two, one in New York and the other in Vermont.

Minor state officers, members of the judiciary, or legislators are to be voted for in several of the states, among them New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Nebraska. In some of the states referred laws or constitutional amendments will be passed upon by the electors. In Ohio, California, Utah, and one or two other states municipal officers are to be selected.

In point of interest the municipal campaigns in several of the larger cities far exceed that of the state contests. In nearly all of these municipal contests the reform questions, especially the enforcement of the dry laws, is the dominant issue. Practically all of the contests, state and municipal, are on local issues, with no national questions involved.

Tomorrow the voters of San Francisco will elect a mayor, nine supervisors and subordinate officials, including two police judges. Seven candidates are making the mayoralty race. Among the number is James Rolph, Jr., the present mayor, whose re-election is confidently predicted by his supporters.

Every municipal election in Philadelphia is regarded as important, and the contest tomorrow is no exception to the rule. The leading candidates for mayor are A. Raymond Raff, Democrat, and W. Freland Kendrick, the choice of the regular Republican organization.

In Salt Lake City the Mormon issue figures in the mayoralty contest. Mayor C. Clarence Nealen, who is a Mormon bishop, is a candidate to succeed himself, and is opposed by Joseph E. Galigher, American party nominee.

Your children's food

The foods your children eat today, determine their strength and health in later years.

Remember this; they must have well balanced meals. Their food should contain the right amount of mineral salts. These salts act as bone building material. They furnish the different fluids and juices that help keep the tissues young—the body strong and active.

Bakings that are made of good plain white flour and baking powder contain a large amount of mineral salts. Allow your children to eat hardy of these bakings together with fruits and dairy products. This forms an ideal food balance.

When making quick rising breads and pastries such as: biscuits, muffins, cakes, waffles, etc., don't fail to use Calumet—the economy Baking Powder. It contains more than the ordinary leavening strength—it's the purest and surest leavener made. That's why it helps make your flour foods light and easily digested.

Millions of mothers use Calumet daily because they are interested in their children's welfare—their present and future health.
