

WHAT IS A MASTER CLEANER?

A "Master" Cleaner is one who is specially chosen for his integrity, knowledge of the business, courtesy and the ability to make good any damage, shortage or inexperience within his control.

The National Association of Dyers & Cleaners of the United States and Canada selects the member, and when once he displays the "Master" emblem you may rest assured he is gilt-edged in working calibre and a very fit individual with whom to entrust cleaning work.

Post and Flag Cotton Letter.

New York, June 25.—The July tender proved quite as large as expected and covered practically the entire certificated stock. Not only, however, were those who issued the notices buying back the cotton but considerable blocks were stopped by other houses believed to be acting for Japanese interests who for some time past have been credited with planning to take a fair slice of the cotton here when opportunity offered. As expected, however, enough of the notices circulated to bring on liquidation by scattered lots under which prices gave way to some extent as buyers naturally wished to get their cotton as cheaply as possible and offered no vigorous opposition to the selling which provided the opportunity for that.

Taking everything into consideration the market gave a fairly good account of itself and it now remains to be seen on what terms remaining shorts in July will succeed in getting. The July story is not yet at an end, but only those willing to exchange contracts for the actual and do their share in financing the stock will receive any benefit from any later favorable developments in connection with that month.

Weather details were regarded as more favorable as there were showers at numerous scattered points in the southwest though at only one or two points in the droughty area of Texas. Light showers, if followed by scorching hot weather, would be a very doubtful blessing. Showers with cooler weather in the eastern belt are quite as helpful to the weevil as to the crop. Any decided ideas as to the crop at this time are dangerous regardless of condition figures or acreage, as weather during the next 60 days and the degree of weevil activity may completely change the outlook. Any guess may prove correct but it would only be a fluke and likely to prove several million bales wide of the mark.

POST AND FLAG.

A whale caught off the shore of Greenland not long ago had in its body the head of an old harpoon, which experts estimate must have been there for fifty years at least.

Some of the ice-fields of Greenland are a mile and a half thick.

Stewart's Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON—Robert M. La Follette was one of the most popular men who ever sat in the United States senate—among his fellow senators.

This may seem like a queer thing to say, considering that he was read out of his own party only a few months ago. To judge from the tone of senatorial debate in which he took part, it would be natural for an outsider to conclude that he was regarded, except within the small circle of those who fought under his banner, at any rate toward the end of his career, as an embittered, cantankerous old man.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Lawmakers who were as far away from him as the poles are apart, so far as concerned politics, personally loved him. They valued his knowledge, admired his character and gave him full credit for the highest ability and honesty.

On all railroad questions he was recognized as perhaps the senate's foremost authority—equally so in tariff matters and to a great extent on monetary problems. Occasionally a new senator arrived in Washington, unaware of the esteem in which the veteran Wisconsin statesman was regarded and inclined to look at him askance, but it never took these juniors long to discover how high was his standing, among Republicans and Democrats alike, at the capitol.

Who would think, now, that La Follette and the late Senator Lodge were the warmest friends?

One of the most dramatic scenes in the senate's history followed La Follette's first appearance on the floor of the upper house after his independent presidential campaign of 1924. Senator McCormick was making a speech at the time. La Follette took his seat directly in the shadow of the Illinois solon's waving arms. It was somewhat difficult for others to reach him under the cloud of this constellated.

Lodge dodged about, like a barytaweight fighter trying to get past an antagonist's defense, finally seized his chance, ducked under McCormick's elbow, as he tossed a hand on high, and threw his arms about his old friend's neck.

Then others thronged around. The McCormick speech was forgotten and the orator himself joined the reception committee.

When Lodge left Washington to attend last year's Republican convention in Cleveland, it was known his standing with the administration group of politicians was none too good.

"If there's anything the Wisconsin delegation can do to help you," they say La Follette told him, as they said goodbye, "let me know."

A funny offer from the senate's ultra-radical to its ultra-conservative, and doubtless said more than half in joke—but with more than a little sincerity back of it, for all that.

"Thanks," Lodge is quoted as answering, "but I don't intend to place myself in any position where I'll need help."

The late Boise Penrose, too! Who'd think of him and La Follette as friends?

Yet La Follette, as those who knew him best will testify, really admitted the Pennsylvania, not as a machine politician, but for being so frankly himself—ne "bunk," no sham—just, out and out, himself.

What will be the political effect of La Follette's death? all Washington is asking. "Is Progressiveism weakened by it?"

It's too soon to say. The Progressives aren't a hard-and-fast group. Their membership varies. It isn't as if a party had lost a leader which it can't replace.

Progressiveism may not even have lost a vote, for it's on the cards that another LaFollette will replace La Follette himself in the senate next winter.

Still, a great personality, a great strategist, a great champion of the cause he stood for has gone.

VIRGINIA PROFESSOR SUSPENDED FOR YEAR

Dr. Albert Lefevre Is Held By Board to Have Used Alcoholic Liquors Too Freely.

Charlottesville, June 25.—Dr. Albert Lefevre, professor of philosophy at the University of Virginia, was suspended from the faculty for one year by the board of visitors of the university by a 7 to 2 vote taken at 3:30 o'clock this morning after seven and a half hours of deliberation.

The resignation of Dr. Lefevre and those of Drs. Williams S. A. Pott, assistant professor of Philosophy, and Charles P. Howze, of the hospital staff, tendered to the board when the trio were arrested following an automobile accident near Montpelier on May 17, last, were not accepted by the board.

The board held that the three doctors were acquitted by a jury at Hanover courthouse of all charges growing out of the accident "save in the case of Professor Lefevre on the one item of unintentional transportation of a small amount of liquor in a pocket flask." "Too free use of alcoholic liquors" by Lefevre by the board to be responsible for his suspension at the longest continuous session of the visitors since president Edwon a Alderman became head of the university 21 years ago.

STATE DEPARTMENT TO BE COOLIDGE SOCIAL MENTOR

Bureau Will Take Over Duties of Miss Harlan, Retired.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—President Coolidge has wished on the State Department a White House social job it did not bargain for. Miss Laura Harlan, who has served as social secretary at the White House since the beginning of the Harding administration, is to retire, and the management of the formal social occasions will be turned over to "some man attached to the State Department."

Coupled with this announcement from the White House today was the added information that "Miss Mary Randolph will continue as the personal secretary to Mr. Coolidge at the White House."

The news of these changes at the White House came as a great surprise to Washington, especially the friends of Miss Harlan.

The State Department did not know of the honor and duties thrust upon it until it was announced today.

The Son of a Fisherman. "Are we going to keep him?" asked Bobby, after a close inspection of his new baby brother.

"Of course. Why not?" asked the mother. "Well, he's so small, I though maybe we'd have to put him back."
