IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

MISS VALENTINE IS AN UNUSUAL GIRL

To Appear in Concord in "The Bohemian Girl" Thursday, January 21.

Unusual interest is displayed in the fact that she is the only woman in America to produce and conduct opera successfully. Year after year has found this young artist advancing step by step until today she is recognized and admired by many of our greatest artists.

At the age of nineteen Miss Valentine conducted the "Robin Hood" score at the Park Theatre, New York, as guest conductor of the late Reginald K. Goven, being the first woman ever to wield a symphony baton. The press throughout the country took cognizance of this unusual girl. Later she became conductor under Victor Herbert. Mr. Herbert once said, "She will be a great artist, for she is a student and has an intrepid determination." So, as the years rolled on, this slip of a girl began to make her mark.

Her greatest ambition was to give to America opera in our own language, above all, sung by our own American boys and girls. This opened a new field that hitherto was controlled by subsidized corporations. European talent was cheap and could be foisted off on the American public at fabulous prices, while the American born artist was driven to the wall.

"Times are rapidly changing," says Miss Valentine. "There is a great metamorphosis coming over our wonderful United States musically. We are no longer a protegee of the old world, and can stand in our own yard unassisted, for do you know there are now being planned and executed great foundation funds throughout all the great cities of the States just for this purpose. To me it is glorious to think the fight is almost won. I want you to hear my American artists, born, reared and educated right here in this grand old country of ours and then tell me if you think it necessary to send them across the Atlantic to be educated, or to bring foreign artists here."

"During my stay in the city I went to meet and know personally those devotees of music who have ambitions for a career. I owe my every allegiance to the music lovers of my own land. They have made me happy in my efforts and happiness and contentment in any organization is the great essential necessary to its permanent advancement, for how can you convey to others that which you yourself do not feel? My happiest moments are those when I feel my hearers' responsive appreciation of my efforts. It is my life; my whole soul is in my work—Your happiness is my joy."

While attempting to round a curve the car in which the women were riding struck an ice bank and turned completely over, breaking the windshield and top. Mrs. Whiting, the driver, was uninjured, while Mrs. Wilson was severely crushed, death occurring almost instantly.

Mr. Wilson was immediately advised of the accident and went to Winston-Salem for the body. He was accompanied back home by Mrs. Whiting.

THE CHRIST-RULED YOUNG MAN

Letters used in connection with the pastor's sermon last Sunday night, at the First Baptist Church; all of these letters, except one, were written by young women.

Dear Pastor:

The "Christ-Ruled Young Man" will not gamble, neither will he indulge in alcoholic drinks. His mouth will be clean in that he will not use profane language.

Then he will honor and respect his parents; certainly he will not be ashamed of them when they reach an old age; neither will he refer to them as "the old man" or "the old woman."

The "Christ-Ruled Young Man" will watch his company. His desire is not to associate with the "rough-necks" of his community, but he chooses to companionship with the cleanest, noblest and most manly men of his town—for you know "birds of a feather flock together."

The "Christ-Ruled Young Man" will be a brother to his sisters. He will give them his first and best thoughts and show them that attention and courtesy that he shows his sweetheart. Many of our purest and most perfect men owe their escape from temptations, incident to young manhood life, to the affectionate companionship of their pious and devoted sisters.

Dear Mr. Trueblood:

"The Christ-Ruled Young Man's" chief characteristics are honesty, sincerity, truthfulness and cleanliness. Of course he would be an active church member, and would be actuated by high ideals, good sportsmanship, courtesy and good manners. Such a young man would not use profanity, intoxicating drinks, or indulge in other harmful practices.

The future of the city, the state and the country depends upon the rising generation. It is important that they have the right kind of habits, religious, etc. Here we have the future mothers and fathers, the future lawyers, doctors, ministers, lawmakers and builders of society. If these young people of today are weak, and have loose morals, and are not building up these characters, the generation will be even weaker than this.

Dear Brother Trueblood:

It is my opinion that Christ reigns in the hearts of more young men today than ever before.

"The Christ-Ruled Young Man" is the fellow who can look you in the face, greet you with a smile, always in a happy mood, honor his parents, humbly follows in the footsteps of his Master, loves his fellowmen, serves his God, and speaks boldly in His cause in all places. And he uses the gifts that have been given him to win others to Christ.

The most promising young man in any community is the young man who has given his life into the keeping of the Master. Big business calls for "The Christ-Ruled Young Man."

Dear Mr. Trueblood:

"The Christ-Ruled Young Man" has several outstanding characteristics. He does not use tobacco or strong drink for these are injurious to his physical body. He thinks too much of himself and the gifts God has given to him, to harm himself in any way.

"The Christ-Ruled Young Man" is, of course, affiliated with the church. He at once becomes a soul-winner for Christ.

He is a power and a leader for good, not only in his church, but also in civic matters. This young man, under the rulership of Christ, will be an absolute success, for with Christ as his guide he cannot fail.

If Christ dominates him absolutely, then he will always be a perfect gentleman. I think that every girl will agree with me when I say that "The Christ-Ruled Young Man" will certainly make the perfect husband—for in him will be the embodiment of all that is good and true in life.

Dear Pastor:

I think a Christ-Ruled Young Man is one who: "Seeks first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness," and lets Him add His earthly pleasures and blessings.

He loves his church and fellowmen, and takes an active part in his Lord's work. He looks to God for guidance and ability to do his part, and does not forgetting the fact that the strength of even his little finger depends upon Christ. He loves his Bible, and instead of keeping it locked up in his trunk he reads and studies it. He will certainly love and honor his parents.

Dear Pastor:

"The Christ-Ruled Young Man" is a great asset to any home, church, or town. He sets the example for family co-operation, sympathy, love and happiness.

In the church he is of inestimable value. His ability to lead, his willingness to follow and to his devotion to Christ make him an example worthy of emulation.

No town is better than its citizens.

KIWANIS CLUB IN REGULAR MEETING

Members Take up Number of Business Matters—Birthday Program to Be Held Next Week.

The regular weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club was held Friday at the Y. M. C. A., at which time a number of business matters were discussed.

Attention of the club was brought to the fact that a crippled child needed a special pair of shoes and a brace. Money for the purchase of these articles was raised during the meeting.

Mortimer Riley, assistant manager of the J. C. Penney Co., was introduced to the club as a new member. J. P. Cook made the speech of introduction.

Eb F. White was introduced as a guest by E. B. Grady.

The club voted to observe "Ladies' Night" in the near future and a committee was appointed to make plans and determine the date on which it should be held.

E. B. Grady, who was program chairman, had seven members to speak for two minutes on one of the letters used in the word Kiwanis. Music for the meeting was in charge of Mrs. Leslie Correll and Mrs. H. G. Gibson.

It was announced that the meeting next week would be the eleventh anniversary of the founding of Kiwanis and a committee was appointed to put on a birthday program. This committee consisted of Tracy Spencer, Howard Collie and Julius Shaver.

TO MAKE A DRIVE FOR SOUTHERN CROWN

Kannapolis Volley Ball Sixette Have Already Hung Up Envious Record This Far—Enter Grueling Training For April 12th Tournament in Atlanta.

BY JAZZY MOORE

Kannapolis, Jan. 16.—The belligerent and tempestuous Pop Flowe, trainer, coach, and star player of the Kannapolis Business Men's volleyball team has received word that the Southern Tournament will be held in Atlanta, Ga., beginning April 12th.

Which means that Pop Flowe will start grueling training for the netters at once in his drive to bring the laurels to North Carolina and Kannapolis.

There will be no tingling of bells if the Cabarrus sixette wins the state championship this year for the locals have completely monopolized the rag for quite awhile. Last year the Kannapolis mowed down every entry of the state robin tournaments and did the "dark horse" act at the Southern tournament in Chattanooga by taking third place. That record is held for Kannapolis people to laugh off.

This campaign the Pop has handled the team with signal success, defeating Charlotte last year runners-up; Greensboro twice; and Concord, practically every other night. Games with fast and artists such as Durham, constant in 1925 for semi-final; Raleigh, and Greensboro and Charlotte again, remain to be played before the tournament begins.

Items From No. 2 School

D. A. McLaurin, a former pupil of No. 2 School and a live and energetic contractor and real estate dealer, very kindly donated a book cabinet.

Thursday at the Parent-Teachers Association of No. 2 School it was unanimously decided to plant shrubbery, etc. in front of the building. A plan was drawn, presented to the association and accepted.

In the near future Mr. Crowell, of East Corbin Street will set out shrubbery which no doubt will add very much to the attractiveness of the yard and building.

Our Parent-Teachers Association is furnishing about forty children with milk, which they seem to enjoy with the greatest relish. The milk fund is still open to contributions.

Should a Girl Keep Her Job After Marriage?

Flances of Small Salaried Youth Fears Poverty and Unhappiness if Her Income Stops.

HOW can I convince my fiancé that I should keep on with my job after we are married?" asks a perplexed young girl in an open letter to the readers of February "Smart Set."

"When I first became engaged, I indulged in rosy day dreams and castles in the air, castles full of happy, laughing children. But being a business woman, I soon began to wonder where the money to build these castles was coming from.

"Brooks is a dear, impractical boy, a Southerner full of old-fashioned 'I-can-support-my-wife-and-a-woman's-place-is-in-the-home' theories that came out of the ark with Noah. I love him to idolatry, to matter what he thinks, and I could gladly yield to the demands of his pride.

"But my sense of mathematics and the example afforded me by the life of one of my sisters warns me that to do so would be unfair to the coming generation.

"My sister Anne married George Kane on nothing. After twelve years of earnest struggle, they still have the shadow of the wolf upon their door-step. The six little Kanes enjoy none of the advantages of our ancestors, and Anne herself is slowly sinking beneath a burden far too heavy for her frail strength to bear. Every time I think of my sister, wearing my old clothes, living in an ugly house in a street congested with uncomely neighbors and worrying constantly about the future of her children whom she adores, I feel a new resolution rising within me to combat Brooks' 'I-wife's-place-is-in-the-home' theory.

"Any girl who holds a secretaryship at thirty per has learned that dreams almost never come true unless the dreamer gets busy and assists destiny a lot. Not for worlds would I be Anne, with six beautiful children and no funds to give them the clothes or home or education or companionship that should be theirs.

"Brooks's family says that I should have confidence that he will rise. Of course, he will rise, if he is able to keep up with his necessary business expenditures and retain his club and college friends! But he can scarcely do all this and have a family on forty dollars a week.

"Mother shakes her head and warns me that the seventy dollars we would make may become so essential in our scheme of things that I may not feel free to stop working and then the little Reeds might not appear to gladden our lives.

"But to me, the prospect of Brooks in a worn overcoat, a coal bin empty of coal, mountains of dirty little clothes and no laundress to care for them, constitute problems a woman may well afford to miss. The birds build nests for their young before they try to raise a family. Should not wives be equally prudent?"

"What shall I do?"

QUICK WORK

House Shipped by Airplane and Erected in Three Days.

Wilmington, Jan. 15.—The Alladin Company, manufacturers of ready-cut houses operating a big plant here, has established Alladin City, 20 miles south of Miami. Ten houses recently shipped by rail and 75 by water from this point have not yet reached destination. The opening of the development with a model house installed was announced for Thursday.

Undaunted by failure of Wilmington-built houses to reach Alladin City, officials of the company loaded at Bay City, Michigan, on ten airplanes, all parts, including piping and plumbing for a six-room house. The fleet arrived at the Florida destination next morning. A large force of workmen erected the house that day and the home was ready for occupancy next day at noon. This is undoubtedly the first instance where parts of a house have been transported through the air for nearly two thousand miles and the building assembled and made ready for occupancy in three days.

Kiwanis Ideals

The ideals of Kiwanis are good enough for general adoption and while living up to them is rather like trying to observe the rules of a church they constitute a majority of fine objectives for civic-minded citizens of any community:

"To give primacy to the human and spiritual, rather than to the material values of life.

"To encourage the daily living of the Golden Rule in all human relationships.

"To promote the adoption and the application of higher social, business and professional standards.

"To develop, by precept and example, a more intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship.

"To provide through Kiwanis clubs, a practical means to form enduring friendships, to render altruistic service, and to build better communities.

"To co-operate in creating an maintaining that sound public opinion and high idealism which make possible the increase of righteousness, justice, patriotism and good will."

Why She Lost the Job

Albemarle Press.

A young lady of pleasing appearance, pretty of face, and attractive walked into one of our stores a few days ago and asked for a position. The proprietor of the store had a vacancy which he was ready to have filled. He observed that her face was artificially treated for tints and color; but this was passed upon without prejudice. But the lip stick had turned the trick. It lost the girl a good job. She smeared on the carmine a little too heavily. The merchant may have been harsh in his judgment, but he was lord of the opportunity that had knocked at the door of this special young lady. He acted within his rights—he wanted no lip-stick clerks. The moral is to be inferred. But this incident is a real one and is told without garnish.

Baltimore has one of the few women's polo teams in America.

Largest Orange Grove in World Will Be Cut Down for Home Sites

TEMPLE TERRACE ORANGE GROVE

GOLDEN FRUIT

TAMPA, FLA.—The largest orange grove in the world is to be cut down and the land subdivided into building lots.

Real estate in Florida today so greatly overshadows oranges in value that the state is being dotted with numerous such citrus tragedies. The world's largest orange grove is at Temple Terrace, a suburb of Tampa, and contains 450,000 orange trees on 4,500 acres of land. The grove is owned now by many people in tracts of several acres and the purchasers bought their land originally with the idea of making profits on their annual crop of oranges.

But with the rapid development of Temple Terrace on the highest and in this part of the state, overlooking the Hillsborough river, the owners of the orange groves are subdividing their properties into residence lots. The sale of these lots will mean vastly greater profits to them than they could hope to realize on the production of oranges.

"These orange trees represent an investment of more than $4,000,000," said D. C. Gillett, president of the Temple Terrace Production. "They are reaching production and are now heavy with golden fruit. But the demand for building lots is so great, all the grove land will be cut up into home sites within a year or two and the largest orange grove in the world will dwindle into a few trees shading the lawns and backyards of residences."

Glorify The Home!

The American home is a source of our present progress and prosperity. When the home loses its influence, the nation is doomed.

When we fail to glorify the home, we then take the downward path. The home should be given its due reverence.

Within its sacred precincts we find the foundation of everything that leads to worth-while achievements.

Therefore, let us exalt and sanctify the home.

It satisfies the deepest yearning that comes to every human soul. It brings peace, content and happiness. God help those who have denied the exalted privilege of home making!

They are to be pitied! And often they are the victims of misguided enthusiasts who have failed to grasp the fundamental principles of the great truths of life.

To possess something that is worth more than life itself should indeed be considered an inspiring privilege.

And where is there a mother or father who will not admit that he loves any one or all of his children more than life itself?

When an emergency arises wherein a parent can save a loved one by sacrificing his own life, a decision is quickly made in favor of his progeny.

"Glorify God in your bodies" is a Divine, Biblical command!

But many really religious people fail to catch the proper vision of the bodily needs. Consequently they are unfortunately minus the vitally essential in the building of family life, and sometimes they become obsessed with a wrong idea of the influence of bodily strength, vitality, and beauty.
