That Name For the New Hotel. Mr. Editor: A name for the new hotel is getting interesting. I notice that Mr. Caldwell favors "Concord" for its epitaph—and the harmony and peace which it stands for. He seriously objects to "Cabarrus" as but few can give it its French accent. I have been here 43 years and I have never heard the name pronounced other than what the most unlettered person would call it, and he was always understood. Let me ask, don't we owe the fellow up north some consideration? He persists in calling our beautiful city "Konk-ord." Take the case. H. C. H.

CHARLOTTE VOLLEY BALL TEAM TO PLAY TONIGHT

Come to Concord for Match with the Locals Which Gives Promise of Being Hot One.

Carl Link and his volley ball team from the Queen City will come to Concord tonight for their first game of volley ball with the locals. This morning, according to a telephone message received from Charlotte this morning.

A game was scheduled last week but was canceled at the last moment when Mr. Link, who is physical director of the Charlotte Y. discovered that he would be unable to have his entire team here for the game. Kannapolis was substituted and the locals were given excellent practice.

The locals are hopeful of a victorious match with Charlotte. After practice this fall with games with the strong Kannapolis six, they have shown continuous improvement. Not only is there a good first string of players, but the substitutes are strong also.

The team that will probably start of the locals will be as follows: Rankin and Wolff, Coltrane and Goodman, and Allred and Easley. Substitutes who will probably play are Aaggart, Fields and Bollinger.

Centenary of the birth of Julia Dent Grant, the wife of President U. S. Grant.

This is also the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Charles A. White, a celebrated American geologist.

Liquor legislation and its enforcement will be reviewed at the annual meeting of the Ontario Prohibition Union in Towns today.

The trial of Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley, of Chelsea, Mass., together with a score of others under federal indictment for conspiracy to violate the liquor laws, will begin in the Federal court in Boston today.

The appeal in the case of Gerald Chapman, the "million-dollar bandit" under sentence of death in Connecticut, is docketed for a hearing today in the Federal court in New York City.

The merger of three Lutheran bodies, the New York ministerium, the New York and New England Synod, and the New York Synod, representing more than 400 congregations, is to be considered at a special session of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of New York to be held in Albany today.

Post and Flag's Cotton Letter. New York, Jan. 25.—The market shows no essential change, being very quiet but with a steady undertone and betraying no symptom of inherent weakness.

At times small waves of short covering developed, but for the most part the market has to rely for support on trade demand which, while in evidence of easy spots, quickly fades away on any advancing tendency.

Apparently buyers of goods are firmly wedded to the belief that so many dates cannot be marketed without depressing prices further, and as far as possible are holding off in the hope that cheaper raw material will be reflected in lower prices for finished goods. Such a policy is susceptible of over-extension, but for the time being is effective in checking any sustained rallies.

Even with such economy, however, the distribution of goods is on an expanding scale as compared with recent years and at prices which leave at least a modest margin of profit to the mills. The report that the American section in Lancashire will further reduce their working schedule may be interpreted as bearish at first blush, but almost anything is preferable to accumulating goods on hand, and conditions in Lancashire are without doubt mending now and the worst has probably been seen. The action can be reversed at any time and apparently not all the mills are finding it necessary.

Goods are wanted in increasing quantity and the longer the appetite for them is restrained the more voracious it will be when given free rein. Weekly statistics for a time may favor shorts, but the risk in taking that side of the market seems quite out of proportion to prospective profits.

NORMAN BLACK TO MOVE TO TAKE NEW POSITION

Has Been Transferred to Take Over Co-operative Work in Union and Anson Counties.

Norman Black, who has had charge of the work of the North Carolina Co-operative Cotton Growers Association in this county and in a number of surrounding counties, has been transferred to another county, his transfer to take effect on February 1st.

Mr. Black will be district supervisor of the district which comprises Anson and Union counties, with his headquarters, at either Monroe or Marshville.

J. R. Leigh will be sent to take over the work in this district, which has been changed to include Cabarrus, Rowan, Mecklenburg and Gaston counties. Mr. Leigh's headquarters will be in Charlotte.

Mr. Black is a native of this county and his many friends will regret to see him leave.

A Tribute to Miss Constance Cline.

In 1904 Miss Constance Cline was elected a teacher in the Concord schools. After serving most acceptably for four or five years she had to give up her work on account of ill health.

In 1912 she returned to the school room and in 1915 she was elected principal of Central Grammar School. She held this position until about a year ago when she had to give up her work and enter a hospital for treatment. For three years she had been supervisor of all the grammar grades in our schools.

I was most closely associated with Miss Cline and her work as principal of Central School and I have never known a more conscientious worker or a more devoted teacher. She was endowed with a charming personality and a strong sense of duty. Her pupils and called out the loyal support of those who worked under her direction. She was indeed a master teacher and she spent her whole life in perfecting herself in her art. Through much of her work was done under the handicap of great physical weakness, she always had a smile and a word of encouragement for each child. Her boys were devoted to her and everyone felt that he had been done a wrong if he had not been placed in Miss Cline's room.

The excellence of our school system is due in no small part to her unselfish devotion to her work. Miss Cline was recognized as one of the strongest teachers of the grade, and her fellow teachers were glad to do her honor. She had served as president of the State Grammar Teachers Association and also as a member of the executive committee of the North Carolina Teachers Assembly. Her pupils, her patrons, her fellow teachers loved her devotedly and eternally along came the influence of her life on the boys and girls of this community. A. S. WEBB.

Thinks Hotel Should Be Named For Mr. J. W. Cannon.

Mr. Editor:

Concord alone did not build the new hotel. It was built by the citizens of Cabarrus county. If Concord were to claim all the credit, I name the hotel without considering the subscribers from other parts of the county it would be unfair.

Why should not Concord honor the memory of the sons of Cabarrus? Atlanta pays tribute to Henry Grady; Raleigh to Sir Walter Raleigh; Greensboro to O. Henry; Durham to Washington Duke; Winston-Salem to Count Zinzendorf; and Robert E. Lee; Greenville to General Poinsett. Are not Concord's and Cabarrus' sons worthy of such honor?

The Stephen Cabarrus would be an excellent name. The J. W. Cannon would honor the name of one of America's greatest captains of industrial empire with Cabarrus as its center, brought thousands of dollars into the community and provided employment for hundreds.

When the stock was solicited the subscribers were promised an opportunity to have a hearing on the name. Did the solicitors tell the

"LITTLE ABIE HUMMEL"

Publicity Long Avoided—Had Enough of the Spectacular, He said. New York World.

"Little Abie" Hummel, dead, is coming back to the city from which he fled after the elaborate fabric of his life collapsed about his ears twenty years ago. This is the news carried by the Associated Press last night from London, where the diminutive lawyer died on Saturday.

His two sisters, from whom he had been inseparable ever since he was released from prison here, announced in London that they would send the body to New York for burial. Together with the late Mrs. Kaffenberg and Miss Bertha Hummel—had occupied an apartment in the fashionable Portman Square neighborhood since the war.

At the age of seventy-five, with death approaching, Hummel told his friends: "I do not want publicity when I die. I had enough in my life."

Publicity Long Avoided.

This was given as the reason why they kept his death a secret. For twenty years he and his sisters had religiously kept out of the public eye—quite as religiously as "Little Abie" kept it in during the previous thirty years of his life.

The career of "Little Abie" was one of the most picturesque features of closing years of the last century in the city. The law firm of Howe & Hummel had a world-wide fame. To the cluttered offices of "Big Bill" Howe and "Little Abie" marched half the criminal world in search of advice and defense. Side by side with them in the crowded anteroom of the old office in Centre Street where the most prominent actresses, the best known of the men-about-town, and all the flotsam of the city's life which had drifted under the overreaching lip of the law.

Inspiration of Fiction. The characters of Howe and Hummel were so sharply marked, so full of curious human qualities, so bizarre, that they have been the frequent subjects of authors. About them Arthur Train built the characters of his "Tut and Mr. Tutt."

"Big Bill" Howe was the trial lawyer of the pair. His dress was a marvel to behold. A yachting cap, madly striped vest, great baggy trousers and diamonds, hanging from his tie and on his fingers, adorned him even in his most solemn moments in court.

Howe was conceded to be perhaps the greatest criminal lawyer of his day in this country. His was the art of an actor. He wept at will and juried seemed to obey the slightest change of expression upon his face.

"Little Abie" began as Howe's office boy. He was a bright boy and soon found a natural place for himself in that office, where shrewdness was at a premium.

"You ought to see my little Abie; he's so smart," Howe would tell every one he met for the first time, even years after Hummel entered the firm.

Caught in Divorce Scandal. "Little Abie" was the office man. In later years he was called "reem-in," "rat," "blackmailer," and many other epithets after he had been caught in the Dodge divorce scandal and convicted of suborning perjury. But when "Howe & Hummel" were at their crest, men spoke respectfully of "Little Abie" in public, whatever might be their private thoughts.

In the shining bald pate of Hummel, enormous atop such a ridiculously small body, were stored away the secrets of many of the city's most prominent persons. He was a veteran first night patron of the theatre; wrote more than one play himself. He was a gourmet of admitted discrimination. He was involved in almost every large divorce action brought in the city.

Many stories are told of Howe & Hummel. Their office made no pretensions except for activity. Law books were piled on tables and chairs. Howe, first known as "Habeas Corpus Howe" from Civil War days, when he obtained the release of many drafted for service by writ, and a great fondness for office boys.

He took them into the firm almost as fast as they were hired. None knew just how large his firm was. At

NEW HOSPITAL MUST BE BUILT, KIWANIS TOLD

Salisbury and Rowan Will Be With- out One in 15 Months Unless One Is Built.

Salisbury Post.

Salisbury will be without a hospital within fifteen months unless action is taken to secure a new one, L. D. Peeler told the Kiwanis club Friday at its weekly meeting when asking that the club donate $250.00 toward the expenses of an election for a county wide bond issue for the erection of a general and tubercular hospital.

Fifteen months is the limit set for the replacing of all wooden structures used for hospital purposes and the present hospital cannot operate with its present facilities after that time elapses.

L. S. Moody made a motion that the club have its committee on public relations act on the matter at once and report it back at the next meeting of the club for final action.

The present plan, Mr. Moody said, was to have the election called May the eleventh.
