What General Sheridan Said. Everybody has heard of the famous ride from Winchester made by Gen. Phil Sheridan. When he reached his retreating troops, according to tradition, he shouted, "Turn, boys, turn, we're going back." But Mrs. Sheridan, the general's widow, who lives in Washington, says those are far from being the exact words spoken by her husband upon that historic occasion.

Eight Hundred Men Fight Fire on Side of Grandfather Peak

Asheville, May 3.—Leaving forty picked men to hold the fire lines near the McDowell county blaze near Old Fort had been brought under control, state and federal fire wardens buried all available man power and apparatus into the Boone area of the Pisgah national forest late today.

Tonight reports from the scene of the trouble were meager but forestry officials stated that 800 men were battling the flames on the side of Grandfather Mountain where the fire is eating into the valuable timber of the national forest.

A slight rain fell on part of the territory affected today but was not sufficient to influence the fight that is being made against the worst forest fire in the history of McDowell county.

Drastic action on the part of the county authorities last night in conscribing men for the fight resulted in the bringing of that wing of the blaze under control near Old Fort and the men released by this fact were sent to the place where the heavy timber growth on the national forest area was providing food for the flames.

Weather bureau officials here held out little hope for a rain to settle the trouble in the forests of this section, although there was some little indication of rainfall late today. The Old Fort end of the fire in McDowell county will be brought under control in the morning, according to the warden in charge, but no such optimistic views are held in regard to the other wing where the national forest is menaced. The blaze started last Wednesday from a concrete mixer at Ridgecrest.

Civil War Looms Up in England

London, May 3.—A general strike in all the great industries throughout the country began at midnight. It effected close to 5,000,000 workers, including more than a million miners, who had already given up their labors in the coal fields.

Another day of suspense, of hopes and fears, ended with a complete breakdown of last hour negotiations between the government and representatives of the trades union congress, who had been delegated as spokesmen for all the men.

Throughout the day and night every effort was put forward to bring about an agreement, and even at a late hour, there was a promise of a renewal of the negotiations, which gave the anxious nation hope that a way would be found.

The final conferences developed out of the debate in the house of commons, but it is still difficult to ascertain exactly what happened in the house, although it is believed that Premier Baldwin and the other ministers had further interviews with the negotiating committee of the trades union council.

Tense Moments. The debate in the commons adjourned about 11:30, with nothing accomplished, and large crowds remained assembled outside the platform buildings waiting the final announcement.

The scenes at Westminster were reminiscent of July, 1914. Downing Street was completely impassable, and the crowds lining both sides of Bridge Street, leading to the houses of parliament and Parliament square itself were estimated at many thousands, silently but anxiously watching the comings and goings of the ministers.

All members of the campaign executive committee of the Y. M. C. A. are urged to attend the meeting at the Y tonight at 7 o'clock. The meeting will be adjourned in time for those present to see the Carolina Playmakers at the high school at 8 o'clock.

"ACHED & ACHED" Lady Says Her Back "Hurt Night and Day"—Least Noise Upset Her. Better After Taking Cardui.

Winfield, Texas.—"My back hurt night and day," says Mrs. C. L. Mason, of R. F. D. 1, this place. "I ached and ached until I could hardly go. I felt weak and did not feel like doing anything. My work was a like burden to me. I just hated to do up the dishes, even. I was no-account and extremely nervous."

"My mother had taken Cardui and she thought it would do me good, so she told me to take it. My husband got me a bottle and I began on it. I began to improve at once. It was such a help that I continued it until after the baby's birth."

"I took eight bottles and I can certainly say that it helped me. It is a fine tonic. It built me up and seemed to strengthen me. I grew less nervous and began to sleep better."

"I can certainly recommend Cardui to expectant mothers, for to me it was a wonderful help. ... In every way I felt better after taking it and I think it is a splendid medicine."

members of parliament and other prominent personages.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation, on leaving the precincts of the house shortly before midnight, said to the newspaper men: "They have refused to accept the general strike is on tomorrow."

Similar scenes were witnessed around the headquarters of the trades union congress in Eccleston square, which, throughout the evening was besieged by volunteers offering their services. Late in the evening, from the room where the council was sitting came the strains of "Glory, Glory, Tallulah," and the singing continued for several minutes.

It seems as if a general stoppage of the press will be immediate, as many of the London papers were able to issue only early editions for the country, the printers quitting at midnight.

All the war time routine measures so far as concerns vital supplies, are being put into effect at once and there probably will be war time regulations for the protection of the public. Theater managers held a meeting last night to discuss whether they should close down during the strike period, but no decision was reached.

A section of the crowd outside of parliament amused itself for nearly an hour by singing "The Red Flag," and cheering for the miners. Another section vigorously sang, "God Save the King."

It looked at times as if trouble were brewing, but the police managed to keep the crowds moving and thus prevented disorders. A. J. Cook, in a statement said: "The government right up to the last has taken the side of the owners and has interpreted the royal commission's report to mean an immediate reduction of wages for the men. That we have refused to accept and will continue to refuse by the help of the whole trade union movement."

"The only terms of peace that are possible are terms that will ensure the status quo for the miners in the coal fields while reorganization is taking place."
