BEAUTIFUL MARRIAGE AT WARSAW THURSDAY

Miss Powell Weds A. Homer Snyder, of This City.

The marriage of Miss Kathleen Powell to A. Homer Snyder, of Concord, was an interesting event of Thursday afternoon, June 3rd, at 4 o'clock.

Miss Powell and Mr. Snyder entered the living room together, to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Martha Greenham. They took their places under an attractive arch of ferns and flowers, where Rev. G. W. Rawlings performed the simple, but impressive ceremony.

The bride, a beautiful brunette, was attired in blue crepe Elizabeth, with grey accessories. Her bouquet was composed of bride's roses and sweet peas, with a shower of valley lilies and fern.

The rooms of the home were thrown en suite, and were decorated with quantities of sweet peas, Dorothy Perkins roses, and snapdragons, forming a lovely background for the bridal party.

Mrs. Snyder is a graduate of Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., and for the past three years has taught Home Economics in the schools of Goldsboro.

When the Frost is on the Rose. It's Time to Get on Agair. New York, June 4.—With frost in widespread sections, record low temperatures for June 4 were reported from numerous northeastern states today.

A year ago today the same section was sweltering under record high temperatures, for the date, mercury standing at 95 degrees in New York. Today 47.07 degrees was recorded, the coldest June 4 since 1881 when 47 degrees was registered.

Frost in Rhode Island and Connecticut were said to have been so severe that crops in some sections were injured and in western Massachusetts a light frost whitened the ground.

A farmer at Carolina, R. I., reported that an entire crop of beans was destroyed by frost. In some sections of Connecticut the temperature dropped below 30 degrees during the night.

ENTICE VICTIMS WITH OLD GAME

Three Card Monte and Cry of "Cops" Still Get Suckers.

New York, June 5.—Sitting side by side in the detective bureau of the station house, the two youths squirmed uncomfortably in the chairs as their victim told how they had swindled him out of his savings. The police had received numerous complaints concerning the activities of the two young swindlers. They had made a practice of loitering in the doorways of banks and sub-postal stations.

When they spotted a fellow who looked approachable they would accost him on some pretext and then strike up an acquaintance with him.

"You answer the description," one of them remarks, "of a fellow we had an appointment with. We were to meet here and go to a place nearby where there is some easy money to be picked up. We went round there the other day and won a couple of hundred without any trouble. I guess our acquaintance isn't going to show up. If you would like to see the operation, you may come along. You don't have to take part in the game if you don't want to. Come along just for the fun of it and be a spectators."

The victim's curiosity was aroused and he accepted the invitation. They took him to a house a few blocks away. They ascended a flight of stairs and knocked on a door. It was opened by an elderly man and the three found themselves in a bare room. The host led them to a table and produced a pack of playing cards. The game proved to be three-card monte, but the victim had never heard of the game before. His new-found friends began to bet on the cards without further ado and the luck was all their way.

Luring Victim. "Why not get in on it?" one suggested, "while the running is good?" The victim needed little urging and he began to play. At first he won consistently and then he began to lose just as consistently. He thought of quitting when he was only a few dollars behind. But the youths encouraged him to remain in the game. He began to win again. The elderly man grew peevish.

"Say," he complained, "how do I know you fellows brought any real money with you? I think you guys are playing on my money. If you are on the level put your rolls on the table, so that I can see you are not pokers. It is just as same there as in your pockets."

The players acquiesced and held their money on the table. Presently the elderly man placed a warning finger on his lips.

"Keep perfectly quiet a moment," he admonished. "It may be the cops. Wait here while I step into the next room and see," and before they could protest he grabbed their money and slipped into the other room, softly closing the door behind him.

"That old guy has got me like a rabbit," volunteered one of the youths, "he hears everything. He's a snuggler, shooter though and our bank rolls are safe. If the cops came in and found cards and money they'd arrest us as gamblers."

They waited patiently for some time for their host to return. Then the youths said they would step into the next room and see what was delaying the old man. The victim wanted to go too, but the two would not hear of it.

"You better remain on guard here," they advised.

He waited a few minutes for them to return and then suspected that something was wrong. Opening the door, rediscovered the room was both bare and empty; the "host" and the two players had mysteriously vanished with his savings of $200.

Descending the stairs, he entered the street and told his story to a policeman who accompanied him to the station house. The detective did not find the two swindlers that day nor the next. But a few days later they corralled them at the entrance of the subpostal station, where they were looking for a new victim.

Many "Fall" For It. "It is really surprising," said a detective, "the way people fall for the most ancient of 'con' games. It would seem that three-card monte, the shell game, gold bricks and the like are new to lots of people. The promoters of these guileful swindles have little difficulty in digging up people who have never heard of these games."

"The type of con man recently has been camping at the doors of banks. They will enter a bank or postoffice station on some pretext and watch a fellow draw out money. Then they strike up an acquaintance with him outside and lead him to a place already prepared for the reception of the poor unfortunate. Usually these con men pick out foreigners. They size up a man by his appearance and they are able to tell after they have had a few words with him whether he will lend himself easily to being trimmed. If they see he is too alert and intelligent, they quickly drop him. They are pretty good judges of human nature and they seldom accost the wrong man.

"The type is likewise to be found in public parks. Here they have little trouble in establishing friendly relations with strangers. They try to find out how much money the prospective victim has and if the victim has ready access to the fund. So convincing are some of these swindlers that they have been able to persuade a stranger to go to the bank and draw out his savings. 'You can't lose,' they will tell the victim and the latter is impressed and believes that a small fortune is within his grasp. After making a haul the swindlers disappear from the neighborhood. Since they carry their office in their hat and seldom operate in the same neighborhood twice, they are not always easy to apprehend."

MRS. FENTON DIES OF PTOMAIN POISONING

John W. Carter, a Negro, Succeeded to Shock When He Barely Misses Auto Collision.

Salisbury, June 4.—Mrs. H. J. Fenton, aged 37, of South Long street, died early today, death being caused by ptomaine poisoning. Surviving are the husband and five small children, the oldest five years old and the youngest an infant of four weeks.

The funeral takes place from Sacred Heart Catholic church Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and the body will be taken on the afternoon train to North Philadelphia for interment. Mrs. Fenton and family were preparing to move to Philadelphia and were to have left for that place today.

John W. Carter, negro employ of the Southern blacksmith department, died suddenly this morning while going to his work, death being caused by shock. Carter was driving his automobile and barely missed being in collision with a car driven by L. L. Nicholson, of Greensboro. Mr. Nicholson, in avoiding a collision, jammed a water hydrant. Carter drove his car a little distance and when he lost control of it a companion riding with him found that he had died at the wheel. The cause of death was given as heart trouble.

UNWILLING GRADUATE PUT ON BOARD VESSEL

Earl Zirkle, Who Refused to Take Naval Oath, Shipped Aboard Battleship.

Annapolis, Md., June 4.—The battleship New York, steaming away this afternoon for the annual academy summer cruise, carried one unwilling passenger. Earl B. Zirkle, of Garden City, Kan., who yesterday upset navy precedent by refusing to accept his commission as a naval ensign, is aboard, on order of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, for another trial of the navy life he has sought to spurn.

Zirkle attempted to refuse his diploma, but he was obliged, under orders, to appear at the commencement exercises and receive it from the hands of Secretary Wilbur. The signing of a commission upon him halted abruptly, however, when he declined to take the oath. While his 45 class mates scattered to various parts of the country for their 30-day leave of absence, Zirkle went aboard the battleship to sail with the under classmen.

His case will not be considered until the completion of the summer cruise. He will be permitted to keep his diploma and Secretary Wilbur and Rear Admiral Louis B. Beane, academy superintendent, expressed the hope that another summer on the sea would cause him to reconsider his decision that he has no "taste" for naval life.

Avowed Husband Hunter is Found.

Atlanta, Ga., June 4.—At least one Atlanta society girl will go to Europe this summer with the avowed purpose of hunting a husband. She candidly admitted as much today when in applying for a passport she designated her occupation as "husband hunting." And she was tabulated as a "husband H." on the application blank forwarded by the clerk of federal court to Washington. The young woman's name and methods of procedure were not given.

Y., June 4.—"Babe" Ruth thrilled a crowd of 4,000 here today when he hit a home run over the right-field fence in the ninth inning to help the New York Yankees beat the Rochester Internationals in an exhibition game, 7 to 2. It was the first time that any man had ever hit over the right field barrier.

Paris Style Hats

BY ALICE LANGELIER, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, June 4.—Black has come back to reconquer its old place in the collections of the great Parisian dressmaking circles.

Many women realize that they cannot wear the fashionable bright colors which unfortunately make them look much plumper. They are therefore seeking refuge in the eternally elegant black costume which every woman knows she can wear. Black satin is being made up for afternoon wear, very often on the dull side when it has a more slenderizing effect, the shiny side being used for the ornamental details. Sometimes it is trimmed with Oriental embroideries in gold and red, which appear to advantage on the sombre background and make a dress look very rich if not so youthful.

For more young-looking are the frocks which show a black overdress open over a colored slip underneath which is a finely pleated slip which comes in any of the shades a la mode. Intense green, strong lemon-yellow, flame-red or salmon rose are very often used with black. Blanche Lebourier favors a lovely rose-pink with many of her black gowns. A Madonna-blue satin evening dress has sleeves of black and perenne georgette embroidered. And an interesting black dinner frock is made of black lace with a rose and blue ribbon running in a triangular shape underneath the lace.

Black taffeta coats are very fashionable when worn with black georgette frocks or summer gresses. Black dresses are richly embroidered with sparkling beads for evening wear. A delightful black ensemble seen at the races had cape sleeves on the coat which is rather tight around the lower hem, with a black band on the black, white-trimmed frock underneath.

Black is the color of a charming taffeta frock for evening. It is combined with black tulle which is made into a rounded yoke and the hem of the same joined by black and silver embroidery. Another "little French robe" as they call them here, is also in black with inset panels of double ruffles.
