QUALITY! PRICE! SERVICE!

These three words must be carefully studied by the grocery man. Everyone wants the best—if prices were not a factor everyone would buy the best, especially in food.

We buy Quality Goods—price them right and turn our entire stock over on an average of twelve times per year.

That is why we can beat the chain store on price and still give you the service of delivery and a charge account.
If you are not already one of our patrons, give us a trial order today.

LOCAL MENTION

Lunday Smith and Lester C. Smith are administrators of the estate of the late R. A. Smith.

Babe Ruth clouted his 25th home run of the season against Boston yesterday, and is now only three games behind his 1921 schedule when he made a record of 59.

Ross Ritchie is spending several days in Columbia, S. C., with friends. From there he will go to Mooresville where he will spend the summer as supply pastor of the Lutheran Church.

A message from Nashville this morning states that the condition of Mrs. W. C. Alexander is still improving, and that she is now able to take some nourishment. She has been dangerously ill.

Marriage license has been issued to the following couples: William O. Black, of Pinehurst, and Mrs. Lillie Christenbury, of Concord Route 6; Eustace Freeze, of China Grove, and Miss Lottie Harris, of Kannapolis.

Typhoid and diphtheria vaccinations may be secured at the County Health Department every Saturday by the residents of Concord. A schedule for the county is being worked on now and will be published some time in the near future.

Miss Theo Morrison, president of the Forest Hill chapter of the Epworth League, and three delegates, Fred Shinn and Misses Lora Troutman and Ruth Shoen, left this morning for Asheville to attend the Epworth League conference.

Funeral services for Jonas W. Mullen, of Lincolnton, were held yesterday afternoon. He was founder of the first cotton mill at Huntersville and at one time was postmaster at Charlotte. He was an uncle of F. M. Youngblood, of this city.

Persons who have not paid their city taxes must do so before Thursday or their property will be advertised for sale under a ruling made several weeks ago by the city aldermen. C. N. Fields, city tax collector, has a notice of warning in this paper.

No session of the recorder's court will be held this afternoon. Cases scheduled for trial are not of unusual importance and as Judge A. B. Palmer is out of the city it was decided to continue all cases until Friday. The week-end was a quiet one for local officers.

Sam Spears, well known colored farmer of the Harrisburg section, brought a cotton bloom to Concord this morning, he having picked the bloom Saturday. This is the first reported in the county from the 1926 crop. Spears has about 25 acres in cotton this year.

Buses will leave the offices of Hartwell Realty Company for the Happy Valley Lake Estates Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday of this week. Many Concord people have already taken advantage of the opportunity to see Western North Carolina free of charge and all have been delighted with Happy Valley Lake Estates.

H. W. Blanks was given a royal send-off by the members of the "Sunday Gang" at the station yesterday afternoon. The boys met at the Y. M. C. A. and went to the station just in time to get in several hearty cheers for their leader before the train pulled out. Mr. Blanks will spend the summer in Europe directing the Concord "Y" Tours.

A monster display car of the Sheaffer Pen Company attracted much attention on Union Street this morning. Everybody who visited the car was given a free bottle of "Strip," a writing fluid manufactured by this company. No goods are sold from the car, the advertising being entirely for the benefit of the local merchants.

America's Encyclopedia—The Census Bureau.

BY ROBERT P. BELL.
Imagine the Hippodrome—the largest playhouse of New York and of the West World! Imagine it filled with people from floor to ceiling, the first row in topmost gallery—orchestra, dress circle, and balconies—a huge aprising, semicircular bowl, lined with human beings. Imagine it thus, and then strip the stage; take away all the strange conglomeration of dramatic activities which these inventive stage managers are accustomed to apply to their productions. Instead of all this, people the stage with an executive body and fix it up as a modern business office—with the customary files, desks, and hard working clerks. But leave the audience—a regular Hippodrome audience on the biggest Saturday night. Imagine all this, and what you have is not the Hippodrome, but one of the greatest efficiency organizations in the world—the Census Bureau of the United States. The imaginary Hippodrome audience is a part of the 90,000 men and women employed by the Bureau during the height of its work and the executives on the stage are the men behind the guns, the 700 to 6,000 officers and employees who work out the problems and compile the statistics of the vast organization.

Ask yourself a question. How much do you know about yourself? From your answer deduct all the unnecessary knowledge and you will have left approximately what the Census Bureau knows about you. It is the largest statistical organization in the world, and as long as it operates on its present plane of efficiency, the Government could, if it would, dare anyone to ask it a question about itself that it couldn't answer.

The Constitution provides for a Census every ten years, and fourteen have been taken. But when it was discovered that the results of a census took ten years to tabulate, the Census Bureau was made a permanent and continuing office. That was in 1902. Eleven years later, in 1913, the Bureau of Census was made a branch of the Department of Commerce and has since been under its direction.

Investigations as to population, including occupations; agriculture, including irrigation and drainage; manufactures, including kinds, plants, value, employees, capital invested and goods made; and mines, including quarries, oil and gas well constitute the main divisions of the decennial census. There is also a report on the blind, the deaf, on institutional population of all sorts, and on our wealth, our public debts, and our taxes and tax systems.

Births, deaths, marriages, divorces, and the finances of cities, towns, states and counties are checked up by the busy Bureau once every year. Every two years it finds out all that is to be known about the various manufacturing concerns scattered throughout the country. And once every five years it thoroughly investigates agriculture and public utilities.

Mechanical recorders and counters are used in the offices at Washington as an aid in the compilation of the necessary statistics. These machines, which do much of the tabulation, punch holes in a card, the number and position of the holes indicating certain facts. When a set of cards carrying the population statistics of Alamance County, say, are turned over to a counting machine and fed through it, electrical contacts made through the holes in the cards automatically register, and the machine counts, adds, and thus tabulates, with a speed and accuracy that no human brain could equal.

The elaborateness of the organization can be better understood by skimming over some of the questions that the enumerators have to answer. Of population they ask: Name; place of abode; color; sex; age; conjugal condition; place of birth; nationality or mother tongue, if of foreign birth; number of years in the United States; citizenship; occupation; employer or employee; school attendance; literacy and tenure of home.

Of agriculture, they ask: Name, color, and country of birth of each farm occupant; tenure and acreage of farm; acreage in woodland and the character of timber; value of farm and improvements; and of farm implements; number and value of livestock, and of domestic animals; acreage of crops for the current year, acreage and value of crops for the preceding year.

Of manufacturers, mines, and quarries, they ask: Name and location of each establishment; character of organization; character of business; or kinds of goods manufactured; amount of capital actually invested; number of proprietors, firm members, co-partners, stockholders, and officers, with the amount of their salaries; number of employees and amount of their salaries; quantity and cost of materials, amount of miscellaneous expenses; quality and value of products; time in operation during the current year; character and quantity of power used; character and number of mechanics employed.

Curious, amazing and interesting are the things that the census could tell us about ourselves, if it chose to do so. It could tell you almost to a person and dollar how many people in the United States own their own homes, the value of the homes and what the mortgages amount to. It could also tell you who give up buying a home as a bad job before it is paid for, and how many finish buying. The live-stock and poultry of every individual farm, their breeding powers and value, is known by the census.

Go down the alphabet. Select any subject you can think of—whether it begin with A, O, or Z. Write your query to the Census Bureau and you will draw reports that are the very last word in conciseness and accuracy. If you are interested, it can tell you how many foreigners, and the number of each nationality, there are in the United States. Or if you should like to know something about the manners and customs of the Indians and Esquimaux of Alaska simply ask the Census Bureau.

Through the efficiency of its census system, the United States probably has a more thorough knowledge of itself than any other nation in the world.

ANOTHER OLD LANDMARK AT DUKE ABOUT TO PASS

Although Dormitory About to Be Torn Down to Make Room For New Building Program.
Durham, June 27.—First steps in the wrecking of Alspaugh dormitory, the first of four buildings of Duke university to be torn down to make room for the new building program, will begin tomorrow when workmen will begin tearing it down.
The wrecking process will be done carefully, in order that materials may be saved for re-erection at Kirtrell college for negroes, near Henderson. Bricks and stone work will be carefully marked and crated for transportation to the negro institution.

Much tradition of Trinity College is centered around the old dormitory and the wrecking of the building marks the passing of a well known landmark.

The stingiest man I know is a man who removes the nails from his worn shoes before he throws them away.
