 An economy-minded Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday slashed $21,502,669 from the biennial appropriations measure.
 The biggest cut was suffered by the public school budget, which the committee voted to reduce by $20,972,246. This left the two-year school budget at about $173,000,000 — some $5,000,000 more than was recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission.
 As the bill passed the House last week, it called for spending about $417,000,000 during the next biennium, about $37,000,000 more than anticipated revenues. The House voted that the State's $30,000,000 postwar reserve fund should be used to balance the budget.
 Other cuts were: $500,000 from the State Board of Health; $46,882 from the adjutant general; $9,000 from the State Recreation Commission; $200,000 from the University of North Carolina;

The Story of a Story...

THE STORY of little Kathy Fiscus stirred the nation. Little Kathy, playing with two other children in a vacant lot in San Marino, Calif., fell into a well-like water pipe late Friday. Saturday morning's newspapers first told the story of little Kathy and of the efforts to rescue her.
 The rescue efforts continued all day Saturday, and through the night that followed. Tons of equipment—bulldozers and steam-shovels and other earth-moving devices — and hundreds of people were at the scene. Engineers and miners and thin men from the circus and midgets . . . all trying to figure out how to get little Kathy out of the well.
 By Sunday morning the whole nation was trying to figure out how to get little Kathy out of the well. The people in San Marino, Calif., found their hopes and prayers shared by people in all of the 48 states . . . people in New York and Chicago . . . people in Attleboro, Mass. and in Amarillo, Texas . . . people in Wichita, Kan. and in Winter Park, Fla. . . people in New Jersey and North Dakota and in Nebraska and North Carolina . . .
 Those people looked to their newspapers to provide the answers to their questions about Kathy . . . they depended upon their newspapers to print, with printer's ink, a vivid picture — and an accurate picture — of the drama that was taking place on that vacant lot in San Marino, California.

THE MEMBERS of the staff of The Winston-Salem Journal knew that the people of North Carolina would want complete coverage of the story of little Kathy . . . and they knew that thousands would look to The Journal for that kind of coverage . . .
 That's why The Journal made arrangements to obtain up-to-the-minute coverage of the story of little Kathy. Photographs taken in San Marino on Saturday were transmitted by wire to Atlanta and then flown into Winston-Salem . . . That's why The Journal and Sentinel on Sunday was the only North Carolina newspaper with pictures of Kathy and of the efforts to save her life . . .
 This is how North Carolina's six largest Sunday newspapers covered the story of Kathy:

(State Editions)	Column Inches Of Type	Photographs
The Journal & Sentinel	61	4
Newspaper B	24	None
Newspaper C	19	None
Newspaper D	10	None
Newspaper E	16	None
Newspaper F	24	None

Again on Monday The Journal was ahead of the field. Utilizing the wire services of The Associated Press and the United Press, and again making arrangements for special photographic service, The Journal presented the most thorough coverage of the final 24 hours of the San Marino story. Monday's Journal had the most complete word coverage of the San Marino story . . . and The Journal was the only newspaper in North Carolina with Monday morning pictures of Sunday's rescue operation.
 The story of little Kathy had a sad ending. The members of The Journal staff had shared with thousands of other people the hope that the story might have a happy ending.
 But whatever the story . . . whether it be the story of little Kathy or the story of the United Nations . . . or the Sugar Bowl football game or a New York fashion show . . . or a fire in Winston-Salem or a war in China . . . the staff of The Winston-Salem Journal will be at work, sparing no effort to make their coverage the best.
