

Early Winter Jobs For Family Garden

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 1.—There are a few timely jobs in the family garden that will help to make it a better vegetable producing spot if done in November.

November is a good month to have a general clean up on the garden. Burn all the diseased plants left and make a compost heap or a manure pile of the refuse which is free from disease. Save the fallen leaves and add these to the compost heap. Plow the unused portion of the garden and leave the upturned soil exposed to the freezing and thawing of winter weather.

"These are all timely suggestions that will help one in having a better garden next year," says E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist. It is also easy to add a few more vegetables. If the old asparagus bed has served its day, a few crowns should be set out for a new one. The vigorous one-year-old crowns are best to use and these should be planted in furrows, 8 to 12 inches deep and covered to a depth of three or four inches. In most sections of the State, cabbage plants might be set for an early spring crop. Lettuce may be planted in cold frames for early spring heading.

Mr. Morrow states that the cold frames and hot beds need to be repaired ready for early spring use. These two pieces of equipment are essential for good gardening. They are easily made and will more than pay for themselves by permitting the growing of vegetables out of season.

Clean Farm Buildings Are Hard On Bugs

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 1.—Grain weevils, insect pests and poultry parasites have a hard time making inroads into the farmer's income when all of the outhouses and storage bins are cleaned and disinfected.

"It is always a good plan to clean out the granary or corn crib before storing the new crop," says David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer at State College. "Farmers know that weevils and other enemies of grain find a welcome refuge in the dirty corners and in the remnants of last year's crop. When the corn crib is empty is the best time to make needed repairs also. Holes admit rats and rats do considerable damage to stored grain during the winter months. The pests are said to be the most destructive animals in the world and it is a good plan to stop their holes with pieces of tin or some other hard material."

Mr. Weaver is also an advocate of whitewash on the average North Carolina farm. Where the farmer cannot afford to use paint, he can at least give the poultry houses and pig pens a good coating of white wash. Even the dairy stables will benefit by such an application. This whitewash will keep the quarters free from insect pests and vermin when liberal applications are made to the walls.

According to Prof. Weaver, spraying the wash is better than brushing it on as the force of the sprayer gets the liquid into the cracks and crevices not usually reached when it is applied with a brush.

The fall is a good time to attend to these money saving jobs, states Mr. Weaver.

Forty-four hogs belonging to two farmers of Pasquotank County were vaccinated by the county agent in time to stop an outbreak of cholera. The hogs were valued at $500.
