

Repair Farm Buildings Before Cold Weather

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 22.—Construction of the necessary outhouses and sheds and repairing the barns and other buildings is a good job to occupy one's attention before cold weather comes.

The buildings usually constructed during the late fall consist of implement sheds, poultry houses and hog houses, states Prof. David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer at State College. Where concrete foundations or floors are to be used, it is best to put these in before hard freezing weather comes.

"This work is not expensive when the labor on the farm is used," says Prof. Weaver. "The prospective builder should talk the matter over with his lumber dealer and see how little cash it takes to put up a shed in which to house the machinery. We find that there is a depreciation of about fifteen per cent each winter in that machinery allowed to stand uncovered and exposed to the weather. Sometimes, this amount of depreciation on high priced machinery will pay for constructing the building in which it should be housed."

Repairs are necessary, also, especially in the dairy barns. Prof. Weaver states that the less food required to maintain the body heat of the milk cow, the more she will have to use in the production of milk. Half of a day spent in repairing the stable will keep out the cold winds of winter and will bring a big return in milk and satisfaction. All holes in the roof and walls should be closed, drainage provided and the windows made snug and tight.

This does not mean, however, that all ventilation should be closed off. Plenty of fresh air without drafts blowing directly on the cow is the proper thing for producing animals.

Surl News

There is a season for everything, and that's the time to make good. Miss Ethel Evans is teaching school near here. Mr. Graham Oakley and Miss Lora Welch were married on Oct. 5th. Mr. Zeb Clayton filled his crib so full that he had to leave some hanging on the stalk. Mr. Mack Noah measured up 110 gallons of molasses. Mr. Ben Clayton is to move to the place where Mr. Jim Planter now lives, and Mr. Panter is to move to Mr. Haywood Black's. Mr. Willie G. Clayton, whom was a merchant at Surl for a long time, has moved to Al to merchandise at that place. Miss Cindy Latta takes a delight in entertaining her young friends. Mr. Arthur Folgerman and Mr. Eugene Knott called on the writer on business matters last Monday evening. Mr. James Harris who runs a saw mill, is kept busy most of the time hauling tobacco for the farmers on his truck. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clayton of Johnson county, visited relatives in this section for the past two weeks.

If you remember the writer called for more local news it is true the town people showed some improvement in visiting each other from towns, but as to the country people, I played in hard luck with them. Tom knows there is two ways to do the same thing, and if he can't get there one way he comes another.

In another state, the farmers are finding that they receive from 70 to 198 per cent more for their crops by feeding them to livestock than they would if they sold the harvested crop.

THANKSGIVING

The old Puritan New Englanders were the first to set aside November 25th as a day for giving thanks for the blessings they had received during the year.

The fine old custom, has endured and so we are about to observe with prayers of thanks another Thanksgiving day.

And think of the many things we have to be thankful for.

Health—safety—peace and prosperity and many, many more. Let us enter into the spirit of the day. Also give thanks for the modern banking systems which have made our prosperity possible.
