SUMMER EGG LOSS MAY BE LESSENE

A toll of $45,000,000 a year is lost by the American poultry industry as a result of improper methods of producing and handling eggs, according to data compiled by C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at State College. This staggering loss can be greatly reduced by removing male birds from the flocks when not needed for breeding purposes, gathering the eggs more often, caring for them properly, and observing other methods of good flock management. Fertile eggs will start hatching when exposed to sufficient heat for a short time, but infertile eggs may be left in a temperature of 103 degrees Fahrenheit for 72 hours and still be good for food. Healthy, vigorous males removed from the flock should be penned separately and saved for breeding purposes the next season. The other males should be disposed of, since they will eat more food than they are worth if kept over the non-producing season. In hot weather, eggs should be gathered at least twice a day in wire baskets and immediately removed to a cool cellar or room where the temperature is 68 degrees or less, and where there is a relatively high humidity. The eggs should then be spread on a table or wire screen so as to cool thoroughly before being packaged. The use of good nesting material and proper sanitation around the hen houses will decrease the number of dirty eggs produced. Many good eggs are sold at low prices simply because they do not look fresh and clean. At least 20 nests, 12 by 12 by 14 inches, should be provided for each 100 laying hens. The nesting material should be changed frequently. Sues His Physician for Concealing the Truth. Cancer Sufferer Doomed to Die Learns His Fate Too Late to Arrange His Business Affairs. Gable and Colbert In Popular Film Romance At Palace

The marked popularity of 'It Happened One Night' which comes to the Palace Monday and Tuesday, July 16-17th, attests the favor in which Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert are held among moviegoers. The romantic pair, teamed together on the screen for the first time in this delightful romantic comedy-drama, enact the most colorful roles in their respective careers. Gable appearing as the knightly ex-newspaper reporter, and Miss Colbert portraying the petulant, supercilious 'Ellie Andrews,' a runaway heiress making her way to New York.

VOICE CREATES MUSIC CAREER ROSS RESENTED

Lanny Ross, the young radio singer, making his screen debut in Paramount's 'Melody in Spring,' which comes for Special Shows Friday night and Saturday morning to the Palace, became a singer because he was forced into it. The popular tenor, who is featured in this mirthful, musical, love story with Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland and Ann Sothern, revealed recently that he once actually detested the idea of singing for anything but his own amusement. In spite of this, his career started early. He knew music even before he could walk. His mother was Pavlova's accompanist, and naturally played in her home. When Lanny was seven, he became a member of the choir in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York. He had a scholarship to Taft school, in Watertown, Conn., and gravitated into the Glee Club. He went to Yale and the same thing happened. He paid his way through Columbia Law School by singing on the radio. Eventually Ross became reconciled to being a singer, and started taking voice lessons. Now his ambition is to be a concert singer.
