HALEY RETURNS, HEADS COMEDY CAST FOR FILMS

Past fun, variety and hilarious action characterize the spontaneous film comedy "Here Comes the Groom," which comes on Friday, July 27th, to the Palace Theatre.

Jack Haley, Mary Boland, Neil Hamilton, Patricia Ellis, Isabel Jewell, Sidney Toler and Larry Gray are the principal players. Edward Sedgwick directed the film for Charles R. Rogers, independent producer at the Paramount studios.

Trying to prove to his girl that he can be a big success in his profession, burglary, Jack Haley gets himself into quite a mixup while holding up a poker game. The cops spot him, give chase and Haley finds escape in the pullman compartment of a railroad train waiting at the station. But his troubles aren't ended here.

The compartment in which he hides belongs to a young bride, whose husband, a famous radio masked tenor, has deserted her because her father's money has suddenly disappeared. She's on her way home and forces Haley to pose as the husband.

With this good start, the hilarious situations pile up, end over end, and the film ends with an uproarious finale.

SALLY EILERS TRIES TO SHUN SHOPTALK

Sally Eilers has no fault to find with Hollywood. It has been good to her and although she feels she has matched with hard work any luck that may have come her way, she has no ill words for the movie capital.

But there is one thing about Hollywood. "We never give the movies a rest," Sally says. "Morning, noon and night we talk about pictures and picture people's stories, plays, previews, performances—and when we go through the entire list of possible movie subjects we start all over again. I'm as great an offender as anyone else."

Upon the completion of her latest Fox Film production, "3 On A Honeymoon," Miss Eilers left for Phoenix, Arizona, for a rest.
