The University of Pennsylvania is said to be 50 per cent stronger than last year. If that is so the Penn. boys will give Yale a close tussle for the championship. Osgood the crack half back and Adams the old centre will not play with them this year. The best wishes of the University of N. C. go with the Pennsylvania team, success to them, we hope they will win.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Sept. 22d, '95.

DEAR PA.—To-day is Sunday, and I've been to church, but I didn't hear no sermon—I was all the time thinking about them fellows you know, which I said in my last letter to Ma, played foot ball.

Taint no foot ball—but you just ought to see 'em now. I went out there—you know Pa, t'other side the little bilding they call "The Library" or "Bath House"—there is there a open plat of ground, just 'bout big 'nough for that "muley" cow of ourn, which we got from Brother Mason—you know—I think he cheated us on that cow, but the milk's powerful good any how if 'taint much, and we've got the calf too.

Oh, yes, about them foot ball fellers—well, as I was saying, about half past four every evening you hear a little feller, that comes 'bout up to my waist, with a great big mouth and short briches, going 'round hollering "foot ball" as hard as he can—just hollerling like calling hogs, you know. Then comes 'out all the rooms more fellers—no I spelled that wrong, when I stood my examination the little professor told me it was spelled fellows—but there ain't a 'nough fellows, so he yells out, "Oh, Charlie," and "come on Pete," "Hurry up Kirk"—"git a move on you Gus"—and a hole lot more come. They all then goes out in this open plot and they got two or three leather balls, blowed up—'bout size of a nickle watermelon—you know Pa, when they's a heap of them you can get a good sized one, but I always did believe that nickle watermelous was what killed Uncle John. He oughtn't ter eat it, an' I told him so too, you know, but them fellows would take a holt of these balls and fling them as hard as they could catch it or miss it. Most the time they missed it. If they caught it, they'd sling it back at another. There was another little dumpy fellow over there with his briches mightily stuffed that kept on ahollering "fall on that ball," and they would fall down on the ball and roll over in the grass, but there were two or three that wouldn't fall down. They said they was hurt or their tooth ached, but I think they were lazy. They then kicked these leather bags some and this same little sort of a sawed off looking boy ran out and hollered—"Line up"—but they were all slow and he and that little stuffed briches boy, the one whose head looks like a rats nest—they all go bareheaded—don't wear no hats—began to get mad cause the fellers were so slow—but that didn't make no difference.

They begun to play foot ball, well, Pa, you just oughter see it—there was eleven fellows that got all clost together on one side and eleven more agin them. They then all begun runnin at each other, and when they hit—golly you oughter heard it, but that wasn't all—one little man with that balloon—you know like we saw at the circus, cepting this aint blue and is maid out of leather and don't bust so easily, and ain't tied to no string, well he had it like a little bundle under his arm and was just arunning, when a big fellow grabbed him and slammed him down on the ground—thought he was dead, but he wasn't, for he yelled out "down." Don't know why he said that for everybody could see he was flat as a pan cake. We don't have no batty cakes here, we has fried ham, some milk and eggs though.

Then these fellows all got up and kneelled down around the ball and that some big mouth boy commenced a counting and spelling out as loud as he could. Then fore I knew it a red headed boy had got the ball and put out a ranning as hard as he could, but twan't no use, for four or five fellows jumped on him and pushed him down to the ground—I tell you there was a big crowd. Pa, you could not tell nobody's foot from his head—but soon that red headed boy hollowed like he was being choked or smothered "down" and some body said "git off 'n hin," and then all got up and kneelled down again. They did this about a half hour, and then quit.

There comes some boys now that wants to go to walk. All the boys nearly goes to walk here every Sunday evening. Will write again and tell you a heap more about the University which is a great place. My love to Ma, write soon to your son in truth.

JOHN PEGRAM.

This cut represents Kirkpatrick before and after he went in training. It grieves us to the heart to have to chronicle the fact that Kirk has fallen off so much that he will not make the team this year.

Lehigh opened with a fresh class of 110 men.

George Case, '94, has been elected captain of the Yale base ball club.

Harvard has the heaviest team in years. There is only one man on the team who weighs less than 160.

Lehigh in her initial game showed up well. The training of Graves and Hefflinger bears its impress. They have a strong team.

The University of Virginia and the University of North Carolina will play the Thanksgiving game in Richmond, Va. this year:

Trinity college say that they have a date with the Naval Academy in Washington city. We do not credit this statement as the Naval cadet team cannot play any team except the Military Academy off of their grounds.

Yale is being coached by Walter Camp. The reports that come from Yale are that the team is weak. The college world have often heard that statement before, but Yale is never weak. Yale's luck is proverbial when the critical moment comes. She is sure to develop a wonderful team and to play a remarkably strong game,

The freshman class at Princeton numbers 257.

Yale plays her first game with Wesleyan on Oct. 7.

Ghas. S. Barr has been appointed captain of the Cornell eleven to fill the place of George Witherbee, who was recently drowned.

The colleges and universities in the south may be able to get out good foot ball and base ball teams, but in the fact, they have never gotten out track Athletic team that have amounted to much. The University recognizes the fact that this is one of the necessary features of athletics that has been neglected and she will this year put out a pretty good team as a starter.

Mr. T. C. Smith has been appointed by instructor Stephens, as captain, and it is needless to say that he will do his best to make the venture successful. We have good material and there is no reason why we should not have as good a track team as we have in Foot and Base Ball.
