THE SHAKESPEARE CLUB.

The club met in the Y. M. C. A. last Thursday night in Wheir Girst meeting of the year. A large number of students and professors were present, and several ladies also favored the club with their presence.

After the roll-call and reception of new members, Dr. Hume, the president of the club, announced subject of the meeting,-"Shakespeare's Treatment of English History," and commented on the politics of the great master. Shakespeare did not wish to provoke discussion or stir up strife, but he aimed to arouse an interest in old English history, urging the people to support the crown. His method was that of the liberal English loyalist of that day. He clothes with flesh and blood the dry bones of history, stirs the imagination and feelings by his vivid portrayals of the secret workings of man's nature. He takes the dry chronicles of Hollinshed, Hall and Sir Thomas Moore and turns, for example, a Richard into a nobler character by showing every side of his nature and the forces that made him what he was.

The first paper was read by Mr. T. B. Lee, on the "Wars of the Roses," as fillustrated in Heary VI. and Richard III. He showed that Shakespeare gives the causes of the wars, the various stages in the long conflicts, the plans and plots of the leaders, the defeat of the Lancastrians and the victory of the Plantagenets, ending with Richard III, on the throne.

Mr. E. E. Gillespie read a very interesting paper on "Warwick, the King-maker, in Shakespeare and in History." He showed the position and influence of this feudal baron, his conflicts and defeat at first; his espousal of Margaret's cause, and the turn of the tide of the Yorkish party; the return of Edward to the throne. In dealing with these subjects, Shakespeare does not, as a rule, go beyond the facts of history, but portrays them truthfully, without over-estimating the strength of the barons or the weakness of the

Dr. Hume supplemented this interesting paper by some remarks on the comitatus as seen in Teutonic and early English life; its growth in England, so that such men as Warwick could arise with almost kingly power, and the breaking up of this feudal system by the Wars of the Roses. I hand the many said

"The Shakesperian Authorship of Richard III." was discussed by Mr. H. H. Horne. He compared Gloster, in Henry VI., 3rd part, with the same character in Richard III., and showed that in the last named play Richard carries out the plans he laid in Henry VI.; that the same Richard is seen in each play, and that the same master-hand follows out the development of the character. Mr. Lowell's criticism of the play was reviewed very carefully, and it was shown that Shakespeare gives us the same conceptions in the two plays mentioned, and that he is the author of

Dr. Battle gave a very instructive talk on the "Right of Sanctuary," tracing the origin of the custom; its workings as seen in the Hebrews and all ancient nations, in Greece and Rome; its progress in England under church influence until the abolition of the "right" in 1623. It was shown that in Virginia and the Carolinas a somewhat similar custom was in vogue in Colonial times band all yet notifical

Dr. Hume then referred to some original work in the metre of Richard III., by Mr. Yunt and Mr. C. L. Van Noppen.

"The subject for the next meeting will be "Romeo and Juliet."

Officers (were elected for the ensuing year. Dr. Hume was reelected president; Dr. Tolman was elected vice-president; Mr. Thomas Rollins, secretary; Mr. H. H. Horne, assistant secretary; Mr. Sawyer, treasurer. The executive committee consists of the officers, together with two other gentlemen to be chosen by them.

The club then adjourned after one of the most profitable meetings we have ever attended an animut Phames five being too parrow

Somebody could make a "speck" on college colors and flags, we think. We hope now to see many of our white and blue flags waving on the foot ball ground this year. When we have games at home or near home there is no reason why such a pretty evidence of loyalty should not be given."It is inspiring to the team much more so than a wild howling mob, whose irregular jeers and personal cries to the players is anything but delightful to listen to.
