POET'S CORNER.

HER ANSWER.

I loved her and I told her so,
And o'er her face a tender glow
Did pass, as when in summer days
Rose leaves are kissed by fading rays.
Oh! Downcast eye and heaving breast,
What else thing could have rendered best
The sweet response that thrilling burst
Throughout my soul, then all athirst,
And symphonied in warm heart-glow
The melody I longed to know?

W. C. T. U.

I read in last week's TAR HEEL the article on the University W. C. T. U. (Winston's Card Temperance Union.) It is not my purpose to discuss the merits or demerits of pledges. I simply want to correct a certain general statement made in that article, namely: that the pledge in the military schools of this state, where it is required, is simply "an airy nothing and a name." Now, this is an unjust reflection on the honor of the students of some such schools, though doubtless the writer did not intend any reflection and in all probability had in his mind while writing, only some one school, and was not thinking of any other. That statement cannot refer to Horner School, for it has no pledges. It is not true for Bingham School; a fact well known to every one who has ever had any connection with that school or who knows anything about its internal regulations. I will explain here how the man who breaks his pledge at Bingham School is treated. If any cadet or cadet-officer finds out that a man has broken his pledge he is immediately reported to the senior captain, who calls a meeting of the cadet-officers and impeaches the man, appointing two officers to defend, and two to prosecute him; and if he is acquitted, nothing more is said about it; If he is found guilty, the verdict is sent to the faculty, who expel him without even looking into the case at all. So it is almost impossible for a man to break a pledge there without its being found out. I was a student there for three years, and during that time only three men were impeached for breaking their pledge. One was acquitted by a small majority on account of extenuating circumstances and the matter was dropped and never reported to the faculty; the other two were found guilty and were expelled on the next morning by the faculty. I do not mean to eulogize Bingham School, for it has never had any stronger sentiment against drinking, gambling and other vices than other similar institutions; but it always has had and has to-day, a deep rooted sentiment against lying, cheating and breaking of pledges. I write this for the one reason that I do not want a false impression to be abroad in regard to the standard of honor of Bingham School, or of any other school which keeps a pledge of honor. X.

THE TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

The tennis tournament was completed on Thursday last, ending in a victory for the Zeta Psi, and the consequent possessors of the cup for this year.

During the progress of the tournament, though much good steady tennis playing was shown there was no approach to brilliant playing by any one. In a college the size of this one we should train or develop some first-class tennis players, and this tournament, together with the formation of the Pan Hellenic Tennis association with the object of keeping up these contests henceforth, should be a step in the desired direction. We do not look on tennis here as we should. Many play it as a means of escaping from the gymnasium, and from the many there is no hope of developing any first-class players. 'Tis from the few that play the game from the love of it and from those who desire to excel in it, that we must look for our good players, if we are to have such.

Tennis here occupies too subordinate a position as compared with the other branches of athletic sport and this should not be. Let us try and turn out some brilliant players, we have the material, it only needs to be utilized.
