POET'S CORNER.

POOR BOY.

The Tar heel poet is a hardened sinner,
Who deserves to go without his dinner
For slandering poor women so.
He talks of things he doesn't know,
And surely he's been "left."

Poor little fellow, he says women are fickle,
He's surely been in some sort of a pickle
At some time not very far back in life.
He must have tried to get him a wife,
And surely he got "left."

It seems he's a hater of all the sex,
Thinks his little satire the women will vex;
He'd better start in and try some more.
We wish better luck this time than before,
For surely he's been "left."

ANOTHER ONE.

Three companions were seated one day
Out in front of a Parisian Caf ,
An Englishman, Frenchman, and "a broth of a boy."

Conversation lagged, and they resolved to employ
Part of their time in telling lies.
They called on John Bull, and thus he replies,

"Hofsten hin Henglish society h've been took

For the Prince of Wales hor else a dook."
The Frenchman, "Sacre-blue and von fine day

Ven down the Boulevard I took my way,
The people look 'round and some one say,
Dere goes Prince Napoleon or Marechal
Ney."

The little Irishman spoke as he sat,
"Say, yez fellers talk through yer hat—
Faith and that's just nothing at all
To an expayrience that Oi recall—
Oi kim home wan night as drunk as a lord;

Faith, yez kin bet Oi said niver a worrud,
But Biddy, my woife, she's a voice like a burrd,
Stuck her head out the windy, and this
what Oi heard,

"O, Jasus Christ, is that you."

THE REASON.

I felt quite sad the other day,
The day before the rain,
Now and then o'er my mind would fly
Sense of coming pain.

The reason, I guess, you'll understand,
I think I'll make it plain—
You know how a little corn will hurt
Like the devil before a rain.

DU HAST DIAMANTEN UND PERLEN.

My love, thou hast diamonds and pearls,
Thou hast all that mortals adore,
Thine eyes are as stars in heaven above—
Sweetheart, what would'st thou more?

And to those beautiful eyes of thine
Eternal faith I swore.
My songs to them I dedicate—
My love, what would'st thou more?

And with those beautiful eyes, my love,
Thou hast wounded me so sore,
Thou hast completely me undone—
My love, what would'st thou more?
—Translated.

Popping the question is all very well,
As a rule an agreeable task;
But when you are forced into questioning Pop
You don't always get what you ask.
—Harvard Lampoon.

The Department of Geology at Harvard sent a party to Gay Head, Martha's Vineyard, during the April recess, to examine the formation of the cliffs on that headland.

Prof. Barnard, of the Lick Observatory, will have charge of the Department of Astronomy at the University of Chicago when the Yerkes telescope is finished.

Lehigh and Columbia played a draw a few days since. Score, 10—10.

Marshall Newell, Harvard's brag tackle, will coach the Cornell team next season.

The seniors at Pennsylvania donned the cap and gown for the first time last Wednesday.

Fifty-two men have so far announced themselves as candidates for Harvard's '94 foot-ball team.

Harmon S. Graves, who coached the Lehigh team last season, will coach the West Point team the coming fall.

The much talked of Pennsylvania-Cornell debate came off last week and resulted in a victory for Pennsylvania.

The candidates for the Princeton foot-ball team began practice Monday. The summer squad will be taken to Newport.

By a vote of thirty-four to twenty the bill to prevent hazing, which has been introduced into the New Jersey Legislature, was defeated.

PRINCETON FOOT-BALL PRACTICE.

Captain Trenchard made his first call for foot-ball candidates last week. About twenty men responded, and the work was chiefly in passing and catching the ball. Two cups valued at $60 and $40, respectively, have been given by the New York alumni, through C. C. Cuyler, '79, to be contested for and awarded to the men making the best averages in punting and drop-kicking. Two contests will be held in the latter part of May. Seniors are debarred. The principal vacancies on the team next year will be at quarter-back and full-back, as Blake graduates this year. The most promising candidates are, Nelson Poe, '97; R. Derr, '97; Leopold, '97; Sloan, '95; Dickie, '97, and McCormick, '95.
