University to give anything to Athletics or to any other movement which does not advance their interests. To this class of men we have nothing to say as we do not think our plan concerns them.

Another class are those who recognize the good of Athletics and who are not able to give as much as four dollars a year. Men of such a class, according to our narrow experience, wish to see all good movements prosper, and are willing to give them their support as far as they are financially able. Also such men are busy men, as a rule, who endeavor to improve every opportunity, and of course they might consider many other branches as more in accord with their interests. So we do not feel that we are wounding their feelings or trying to infringe on their rights when we propose such a plan. Instead, we believe, that they will recognize that it is good for Athletics, and will gladly add to the funds as far as their ability will permit.

Then the third class, composed of those who are able and willing to give a substantial amount each year.

This is the class which would make up the Association and we think that it includes a large majority of the students. Many of this class now fail to make their subscriptions larger because they have not recognized our many needs and because they are apt to be influenced by the presentation of a subscription list which contains many smaller subscriptions. We believe that this class of men will be glad to adopt our plan and thus put our athletics on a firmer financial foundation.

In our present condition, while we thank most heartily those of our Alumni who have aided us, we regret that only a few take much interest in our athletic life, beyond a passing interest in the result of our games.

We think, if the matter were properly presented to them, by the Association, many, especially among the younger ones, would be glad to become members of the Association, thus giving us a revenue from the Alumni which is now entirely absent.

Though we advocate the plan of having the athletic dues in accordance with the ability of the average student, yet we would be glad to have it understood that this did not restrict either alumni or students from adding to the amount.

As to the practical workings of such a system, we believe that it would at least put us in a position to properly support our teams each season, and it is probable that it would leave a surplus, each year, which would remove the athletic debt, and finally make it so that Athletics could help other departments of the University.

We invite the Advisory Committee, Alumni and students to give us their opinions in regard to our plan.

We urge upon the Association the present and increasing need of alleviating the existing evils and we beg them to consider this plan. It is, at least, worth that much, and the time has surely come when some radical change is necessary.

College Recipes.

Little lumps of sugar.
Little spoons of rum,
Makes the finest toddy
Underneath the sun.

2
Little mint and sugar,
Lots of good old Rye,
Makes the finest Julep
Underneath the sky.

3
Little sweet and bitters,
Cups of Oscar brand,
Makes the finest cocktail,
In this wondrous land.

4
Several cups of liquor,
Sugar cream and eggs,
Makes a mellow eggnog
And too limber legs;

5
Cocktail Punch, and Eggnog,
Mixed with Mountain Dew,
Bring on howling jaglets
Snakes and monkeys too:

Red and Black.

"The Way it is Now."

[Communicated.]

Well boys, I tell you that the times
Is gettin' pretty lame,
An' no one knows what's coming next
Since them there "measles" came.

The nasty, pesky little things
Has fairly took the school,
An' Seniors, Juniors, Sophs and Fresh
Are in the hospital.

An' Doctor Dick an' all the "Meds"
Is fairly on a raid,
With powders, pills an' medicines
An' bilin' lemonade.

An' Mister 'Mac' is run to death,
The students getting poor
While Sanny Merfitt's getting rich
A sellin' at his store.

An' faculty an' preachers too
Is scared to beat the Jews
For fear they'll get them "measles" too
An' follow them with "blues."

So boys, let have a pray'r meetin'
With George an' Horne to lead,
An' that these measly things may go
Come let' all pray an' plead.
