A Suggestion.

The improvement made in the Library since the Societies placed it entirely in the hands of the faculty are recognized and appreciated by every student in the University.

In fact the the consolidation of three libraries under three different managements, into one library under one management has rendered our library one of the best in the South.

But while the number of books has been greatly increased and their arrangement greatly improved, yet there is one thing the faculty have failed to control with the same success that the Societies met with.

We refer to the conduct of the students.

When the Societies had the management of the Library and Reading Room no student would dare enter the door with his hat on or with a pipe or cigar in his mouth. It was a place kept with decency and in order. We are sorry to note that this is not the case now. Students lounge around the reading room in a disorderly manner, with hats on, pipes or cigarettes in their mouths, and their conduct is very little better in the library itself.

The Library and Reading Room should be the most refined and most neatly kept place in college.

It should be one place where a student can retreat without being annoyed by loud talking, tobacco smoke and many things which belong elsewhere, if anywhere at all.

Can not the students take a second thought and show pride enough to make the library a more respectable place? If not can not the faculty devise some measure whereby they can control the matter as the Societies once did?

Let us all consider ourselves an offender and let each one resolve to do his part in correcting the abuse.

A Communication.

The one thing long boasted of by University students is that we are a self-governing body. We have taken pride in the fact that the moral courage of the student body always prompted to discountenance immoral conduct and to drive from their midst a fellow student who had proved himself unworthy of being one of them. This sentiment prevailed among the students as a whole; but took on its definite form in two literary societies—the only organization of students which had the power to make laws to govern college.

This was when every student in College was forced to be a member of society, and consequently when every student could be reached by that self-governing authority that resided in the societies. A student's conduct on the campus at night or day, in the buildings during study hours, in the library and reading room was controlled by societies when it required such control. This has all passed from the societies and now there seems to be considerable doubt as to whose duty it is to correct the gravest offense we ever have to deal with—cheating on examination.

Several attempts have been made to constitute an authority which shall govern such cases. The very fact that an attempt to create a new authority to co-operate with the faculty was made, is an admission that the societies have lost their usefulness in this respect.

This has all grown out of the fact that many students are not members of society and can not be reached by society. It is no wish to discount the value of society to correct abuses; but it is a feeling that some authority must exist which will reach every student, whether a member of society or not.

The college Senate has failed and cannot be revived. A suggestion that the classes organize for this purpose meets with little encouragement. In fact such an arrangement is impracticable and would prove itself wholly inadequate.

The question naturally arises what next? The Societies must control what self-government the students have remaining.

Let their conference committees meet and agree on stipulations whereby the societies will have the authority to bring a charge against any student in college, when there is sufficient evidence to support that charge. The faculty and Trustees will readily grant this request. When a student is to be tried for cheating on examination or some similar offense let the societies meet together as a court and jury, and try the offender not as a member of society, but as a college student. Let them report their proceedings to the faculty who shall inflict the penalty. There can be no objection to such a plan as this.

Under the present circumstance there are many reasons why the two societies as one body should be the long talked of College Senate. There is no reason why this authority should be taken from them and placed elsewhere.

There is an increasing feeling in college that it is no body's business to start the prosecution of an offender, and one who takes such a part is considered by some as somewhat officious. This should not be so. Any student who has the manhood to stand by his convictions and take the lead in uprooting gross offense, is the man who is putting the moral standard of the University on a higher plane. Make it distinctly understood that the right to summon an offending student to trial still belongs to the societies, and you will see their members more willing to use to the advantage of the University that authority which belongs to them.

Meeting of the Athletic Association.

A meeting of the General Athletic Association was held in the Chapel Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of considering articles of agreement to govern athletic contests between the University of Virginia and North Carolina for the next three years.

The articles were read to the Association by Dr. Venable for its consideration, and were readily adopted. They will be published later in full; after receiving the official sanction of the Athletic Association of U. Va.

On motion of Mr. Graham the Advisory Committee of the Association was appointed to present some plan for organizing the Association upon the condition of a stipulated annual fee for membership.

Meeting adjourned 2:30.
