Kim hits a long fly to Brem, scoring Hoxton and Cochran's hit sends Bonney across the plate. Cochran steals second and is left there by Lockett's fly to Stanly.

Stanly and Winston both give Dillard a long fly and Gregory lines one out to Bonney.

Ninth inning. Bailey eats up McGuire's foul. Marshall gives Whitaker a fly and Dillard gets a hit. But it's of no use, as Johnson throws Garnett out.

Below is the score and summary.

Notes of the Game.

The umpiring of Mr. Heydler was very fair and impartial and he gave as thorough satisfaction as a man could give in a game full of close decisions.

Winston was full of grit to get out of bed and put up the game he did.

The fielding of the Carolina team was almost perfect, our only error costing nothing.

The Virginians batted well but their hits were bunched in only one inning and their fielding was ragged at critical moments. Their support for Lockett in the seventh was poor.

Pearsall and Hill both pitched good ball, keeping the hits scattered.

The Carolinians bunched their hits on McGuire in the sixth, making four hits and a sacrifice after he had given two bases on balls.

The Carolinians were much gratified to see so much White and Blue on the grounds and they wish to thank the people of Danville for their nice treatment. They were especially pleased with the accommodations at the Burton.
