Inter-Society Debate.

[Concluded from first page.]

range business by confused relations with labor and capital, (3) flexible, (4) provides a self acting increase of revenue and (5) renders calculable and steady return.

It is wise politically and socially. It is practical and expedient, as evidenced by its long and successful use in the civilized countries of the world.

Mr. Brogden, for the negative, said that the tax was antagonistic to democratic principles. He argued that the income tax was a (1) relic of the dark ages, (2) unjust, as it did not affect all equally, (3) that it would be likely to drive money out of circulation into U. S. or state banks, as they are not subject to taxation, (4) that an income tax is a measure against individual rights, (5) that it is desirable neither from a capital nor labor standpoint, (6) that it is against economy and industry.

Mr. Kluttz then spoke for the affirmative, and began by denying the fact that an income tax was more inquisitorial than any other tax. To levy upon wealth for its own protection cannot be called class legislation, but the income tax includes all and does not violate any personal privileges, does not regulate prices, and is a sure measure for paying off government debts.

Mr. Shepherd, on the negative, was the last speaker. Circumstances regarding the imposing of an income tax, he said, are different in the United States from what they are in other countries. A similar tax now existing in England is not approved by the people nor by Parliament, but is a cause of numerous fraudulent practices, so that Mr. Gladstone has often tried to repeal it. To collect such a tax is costly, and it would cause a conflict between State and Federal authority. It is not absolutely necessary to run the government, is of injury to the poorer states, and would be a powerful instrument for the political party in power; therefore why have it?

The debate, on the whole, was probably the best ever engaged in by the two societies, and was so close that the Committee was not unanimous, but only decided for the affirmative by a vote of two to one.

The Dramatic Club will probably give a performance in Durham next Saturday night.

A Wonderful Invention

Zoology teaches that the hairs of the head are hollow, and contain an oil that gives them life. In clipping the hair with scissors, this hollow is left open, and the hair loses its life-giving properties.

I have a Machine named the Singeing Machine, which removes the hair and at the same time closes up the hollow, causing the hair to retain its life-giving properties, and therefore stopping the hair from falling out or dying, and giving it a soft growth.

Call and examine this machine and have your hair singed.

Special attention given to dressing Ladies' hair. Cutting done with exquisite and artistic skill by the old University Barber of twenty years' experience.

The singing machine is highly recommended by scientists throughout the country.

Very Respectfully,
T. D. DUNSTAN,
Professor of Tonsorial Art.

Faculty Lecture Next Week.

Dr. Linscott will deliver his lecture on "Zoroaster, His People, Language, Religion" next Thursday night. Friday night, April ninth was the appointed date, but it is moved back to Thursday to accommodate the Dramatic Club, which performs Friday night.

Dr. Linscott has not lectured to the Chapel Hill public before, but we are sure that his subject will prove both interesting and instructive to any and all who attend.

Dr. Isaac Manning has just won the hospital appointment at the Long Island Medical College over several hundred applicants. Dr. Charles Roberson won the prize, which is, next to the hospital appointment, the highest honor to be gotten in the college.

The University Medical Department is to be congratulated on having two of its former students win such high honors in so large and celebrated a college.

Philological Club.

The Philological Club met in the English room on last Tuesday evening at half past two o'clock, President Harrington in the chair. The following papers were read:

Some Reasons for the Amalgamation of the Optative and Subjunctive in Latin. Mr. Linscott.

Puns and Pronunciation in Shakespeare. Mr. Hume.

Studies in the Diction of the Roman Poets. Mr. Harrington.

A Character-Sketch from Götz von Berlichingen. Mr. Toy.

Notice Foot Ball Players.

To all of last year's foot ball team and scrubs, and to all who intend trying for the team next Fall, please take notice.

I should be glad if you would go out on the track team, with the special end in view of learning to get a quick start. It will increase your wind and put you in good form for next Fall.
