The Shakespeare Club Meets.

The first meeting of the Shakespeare Club for this college year was held Monday evening. The programme was most interesting, and the evening was delightfully spent. Dr. Hume, in opening the meeting, made an interesting talk about the history of the Club, the immortal genius whose works it studies, and the noble purpose of the Club—a broader literary culture for the University.

On the conclusion of Dr. Hume's remarks, new members were received. Dr. Hume, who founded the Club, and has served it so long and faithfully, was re-elected President. Prof. W. D. Toy was elected Vice-President; Mr. Geo. McKie was elected Secretary; Mr. A. R. Berkeley, '00, was elected Treasurer.

Mr. N. C. Curtis, '00, read a well-written paper on "Shakespeare's Method of Using the Old Chronicles." Shakespeare found it necessary, on account of the inadequacy of stage settings in his day, to put in chronicles, the object of which is to stimulate the fancy. The main event of the play of Henry 5th is the Battle of Agincourt, and is given with a fullness which exemplifies how Shakespeare took a few hints from Holinshed and made a wonderful drama. The correspondence between play and chronicle show that the former is a paraphrase of the latter. In the scene in which the conspirators are discovered, Shakespeare introduces a very effective incident which is not historical. Shakespeare has also made the Dauphin appear at Agincourt, contrary to history, but with fine dramatic effect. Henry's courtship of Katherine has its counterpart in history. Mr. Curtis did not do justice to his admirably written paper in the reading of it.

Miss Stockard read an excellent paper on "The Famous Victories of Henry V, and Its Relation to the Shakespeare Plays."

"The Famous Victories" is a weak and insipid product, and Shakespeare cannot be called a plagiarist for using it. It is dross; his play is pure gold. The incident of Hal's taking the crown before his father's death is the same in the old play and in Henry V. The history found in the first act—the argument of the archbishop, the sending of the tennis balls, etc. are the same in both. In the old play there are but a few lines referring to Sir John Oldcastle, Shakespeare's immortal Falstaff. Oldcastle is a skeleton; Falstaff is a great original creation of flesh and blood.

"Reflections of Old English Life in Henry IV and V" was the title of an entertaining paper by Mr. A. A. Holmes, '01. In that time there were no kitchen utensils and no napkins, as we learn from the two plays. In the first scene of Henry V we see the very close relationship of Church and State. The arch-bishop of Canterbury was the prime minister of England. It is interesting to note the attitude of hostility which Scotland maintained towards England. Hal, the popular king, brings the hostile Welsh into sympathy with his purposes. In Henry IV we have an interesting picture of the inn life of the time. Other minor customs of the time were commented on.

Mr. McKie gave a very entertaining and instructive descriptive account of the stage settings of Richard III in Shakespeare's day. The Club then adjourned, the unanimous verdict being that the evening had been one of rare pleasure, an intellectual feast.

Resolutions of Respect.

Di. Hall,

Oct. 14.

Whereas, God in His infinite Wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our fellow member R. S. Deaton, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we the members of the Dialectic Society, while bowing in humble submission to the Divine Decree, can but deeply realize and regret our loss.

2. That in his death this Society has lost an earnest and faithful member.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

4. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Society and copies furnished the TAR HEEL and the University Magazine.

Mr. W. H. Swift has tendered his resignation as the Di society's Junior representative in the inter society debate next month. Mr. W. A. Murphy '01, was elected in his place.
