The Kellogg Lecture.

The first of the star course lectures was given Wednesday night by Mr. Charles D. Kellogg, naturalist and bird-warbler. Mr. Kellogg has the decided gift of reproducing the songs of birds, in the exact way that the birds themselves sing by the use of the throat and not of the lips.

From the time he began his first selection, "A Bunch of Blackbirds," to the end of the recital he furnished the audience with pure entertainment. Besides the music of his bird songs he gave many interesting and instructive facts of bird life, illustrating all with stereoptican views. As the lantern operator threw upon the screen pictures of birds and their homes, the lecturer told of their habits and reproduced the songs of each. At the close of his recital he told of a trip to a certain rock in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where he studied the numberless birds which live there. The rock rises abruptly from the water to a height of more than a hundred feet. On it live a family of five persons, whose business it is to fire bombs warning sailors to keep away. In the crevices of the rocks live the birds. Their food they get from the water below. Mr. Kellogg's story of his experience in descending the rock and getting among the birds in the crevices was highly interesting.

As an entertainer Mr. Kellogg is excellent; as a naturalist he gave to his audience new ideas and a better appreciation of nature. Everyone will see more in the song of a bird after having heard him.

Tennis Association Organized.

Last Wednesday evening at 7.30 a mass meeting was held in Gerrard Hall for the purpose of organizing a Tennis Association. Mr. Horner Winston was unanimously elected president, and Mr. Hal Worth secretary and treasurer.

The newly elected president proceeded to explain the organization: its purpose and its plan. The desire is to promote ability in tennis in such a general way that the University shall possess many good players and several with superior skill. To aid this, Dr. Venable has consented to allow as many courts as are needed, for instance, five or six, to be built side by side on the old athletic field convenient to the new gymnasium. This arrangement of the courts will make the playing unusually interesting and agreeable. The players will be enabled to take interest in each other's work, and spectators will be attracted. After the game the players can go to their lockers in the Gym. and then be refreshed with baths. And next year the University can send out to other colleges not only one but several good tennis teams.

A tournament is to be held this week on some of the scattered courts that we now have around college. In doubles strong and weak players will be put together to make even matches. To the winners there will be given handsome prizes. The admission fee to the association is at once very small and sufficient—$2.
