"Figures Don't Lie"

IF SEEN IN A MIRROR

You can see the style of our suits in the looking-glass, with nothing added to or taken from. You can know that woollens, tailoring, linings, and trimmings are sound as a dollar because we stand back of every garment we sell.

Drop in and slip into one of our new spring models and see how you look.

Just Gossip

No, I think inconsistency is the most curious trait in the world. Editorializing the deuce. I can prove it. Of course this line has to get by the Desk Editor, who hasn't much of a sense of humor, and so I may never be justified in the public mind. The Editor may think I am moralizing and so I may lose my job. But Columbus took a chance, so here I go.

Let us consider this matter of inconsistency for a moment, and after a period of careful reflection we may find ourselves back where we started, which is the purpose of reflection anyway. Therefore, one might say that one can't go very far afield when reflecting, but one won't—not here.

Oh, yes, we started out to prove something. One man gets up in Literary Society and with impassioned oratory pours forth his soul in a hair-raising Phillipic against the chap who cornered the tooth-pick crop in Idaho, and deplors the high cost of flour with every deploring muscle he has—and then the next day at Swain, he lays a comrade low and cold by hitting him at close range with a biscuit.

Another gentleman who carefully transfers the dust from a church pew to his coat every Sunday, and who is avowedly against draw-poker as a means of spiritual refreshment, matches his neighbor out of his specimen of pie. A scout chips in to purchase bathing fountains for the birds, and soon after is observed removing one of the dwellings of the feathered animals, eggs and all, in a praiseworthy effort to decrease the winged population of this immediate vicinity and so prevent the pools from being worn out by overuse.

One young man who fiercely attacked the motives of his fellow students in staying away from the drill ground, was noticed to be very much absorbed in contemplating the top of a tree while Parker was trying to blow his teeth through the bugle behind the Med. Building. Verily, del Sar-to, old socks, it is a strange world. And so it goes. I could name many other instances of this wonderful phenomenon, as the instructor in physics says after he has finished balling up your experiment for you, but I won't here, for several reasons: I hear a rooster crowing, this column is about full, and the Assignment Editor didn't say how much to write. Words, words, words, as Hamlet so feelingly put it.

"Hello, Mike!" greeted the vaudeville actor.

"Lo, Jack! How are you and Pete?"

"Pete's in the hospital," gloomily responded Jack.

"So? What's the matter?"

"You know Pete's act—swallowing three billiard-balls while balancing the cue on his eyebrow?"

"Yeah."

"And you remember he had threads tied to the balls, so he could pull them up as soon as he went off?"

"Yeah."

"Well, he got rattled the other night and leggo the threads."

"Dorkins is a wonder."

"Yes, he's a far-sighted chap. What has he done now?"

"He's gone and patented a carbureter that will burn air and has it all ready in case the supply of gasoline should give out."

WHEN writing a formal social letter you give most careful consideration to your choice of words. Sometimes you consult a dictionary. The quality of EATON'S HIGHLAND LINEN will enhance the dignity of your message and reveal your sense of fitness of things no less than the well phrased letter reveals your sense of value of words. Yet, it is so moderate in price, it can be used for all social correspondence purposes.

We specialize in writing papers of all kinds, from tablets and typewriter papers to the best in box and pound paper.
