Leo Carr led the discussion at a meeting of Amphoterethon on Thursday afternoon on the subject, "Should the Citizens of the United States be Compelled by Law to Exercise the Right of Suffrage?"

"Buzz, honey, bee-have." But there was no sting in the co-ed queen's voice.

Yesterday Hal Cooley drove a stripped skiff into a field of corn and shocked it.

doing high school work, namely city high schools and local high schools. There are 80 of the former and 157 of the latter, enrolling respectively 10,000 and 3,000 pupils. In addition to these 483 public high schools—city, State, and local—there are 26 private high schools and 66 church schools of secondary grade, enrolling together about 5,000. There are in North Carolina 575 secondary schools enrolling 30,000 pupils. Not quite 50 per cent of the 575 schools are offering 4 year courses, and not quite 10 per cent of the 30,000 high school pupils are pursuing fourth year studies."

Professor Walker emphasized the need of developing in all the counties strong four year high schools, sufficiently well-equipped and financed to provide for the needs of the youth in every county wherever secondary school training is needed. "The local high school cannot meet the need for high school training in a modern democracy," he said. "It has not nor can it secure sufficient money, equipment, teachers, or pupils. The county high school with stronger financial backing, larger teaching force, better equipment, dormitories and inexpensive boarding facilities, and transportation of pupils where necessary, must take the place of the small local high school if the needs of democracy are to be better met through better educational opportunities of the youth of the land. A recent decision of the Supreme Court, declaring the county high school, commonly called the State high school, to be an organic part of our general public school required by the constitution, opens a new door of opportunity in secondary education and makes possible a new era of high school development in North Carolina."

With the White and the Blue of Carolina blending harmoniously with the Black and Gold of Goodyear, the Akron sojourners of the past summer met last Saturday night in the Y. M. C. A. and pulled off a big smoker. Prof. Collier Cobb gave a very interesting talk on "The Advantages South America Offers to a Young Man." Several members spoke on topics of interest. Twenty-one men in college belong to the Carolina-Akron Club.

V. E. Johnson and "Chip" Arbogast have left for Washington, D. C., where they will stand examinations for entrance into the Coast Guard service.

On Sunday, December 16, the Archdeacon Lawrence of the Episcopal Church will deliver the University Sermon for the month of December.
