CHAPEL HILL HARDWARE COMPANY

Did I Hear You Say Nix?

Don't try to pull that stall on me, Bill; I've been 'round the Hill too long to fall for it. You're going to spread it on during the commencement same as I am and the rest of us Carolina men, but what I'm tryin' to do is to get you hep to the proper place to take on those glad rags. You go to Slater's over here at Durham and tell Buck Slater or Becky or Slim Sorrel to doll you up just right for Commencement. And say, I'd do it right away.

With Every Blossom

from the box comes kindly thoughts of the sender of such beautiful flowers. Flowers appeal as nothing else can or does. Especially such perfectly lovely roses, carnations, sweet peas etc., that can be had here at all times in any quantity, small or large, at prices that one need not be rich to afford.

THE UNIVERSITY'S WAR-TIME RECORD

The record of the University of North Carolina in the world war is one of which every North Carolinian can feel justly proud. From the first call to arms in April, 1917, until the signing of the Armistice in November, 1918, the University sent her sons in an almost continuous stream towards the training camps—and France. During this period, according to the information received by the University Registrar, more than 2,300 University alumni and students have donned the khaki and the blue and entered the service of their country.

Out of this number there were three Brigadier Generals, ten Colonels, seven Lieut-Colonels, thirty-four Majors, ninety-two Captains, two hundred and seventy-four First Lieutenants, three hundred and eighty Second Lieutenants, six Chaplains, twelve Y. M. C. A. workers, and a number of officers of varied ranks in the naval service.

Many members of the faculty forsook the classroom to hurry to training camps, while some volunteered for government work on expert war boards. The Commencement of 1917, with Secretaries Daniels and Baker present, was the most patriotic in the history of the institution.

University Answers the Call

The call to arms in April of 1917, found military training on the University campus in full swing with a steady exodus of students and alumni to the training camps which continued unabated until hostilities ended in Europe. Over 250 alumni and students rushed to the first officers' training camp.

At the same time the University intelligently listed and classified its students and alumni and unselfishly offered its manpower and resources to the government.

War Extension Service

But, the University was not merely content to serve its students in this national crisis, so the Bureau of Extension, recognized as affording the most effective means of reaching the mass of the people of the State, adapted itself to war needs.

A war educational service, centering around study centers, lectures, correspondence courses, war information leaflets, etc., was established whose chief function was to make clear American aims, purposes and ideals in relation to the world war.

The University believed that important as organization was, and all forms of directly helpful co-operation with the government in raising men and money and assisting in food and fuel conservation, its chief service in its war relations and its unique service as an American institution was in the field of education.

With this in view University professors were sent to all parts of the State wherever the demand arose to discuss the underlying causes of the war and America's part in relation to it. War study centers were established in many towns throughout the State and special lecturers were sent to other localities throughout the State to arouse the patriotic fervor of the people.

The Result

The result in brief is that over 100,000 people have heard lectures on war subjects by members of the University faculty; more than 75,000 war information leaflets have reached North Carolina homes; the war editions of the University News Letter have increased to 15,000 weekly; and the war study centers organized last spring have enjoyed a membership of 600.

The University Union

The next step of the University was to enroll as a member of the American University Union in Europe that Carolina men at the front might be reached, helped and enabled to keep in close touch with Alma Mater. Through this connecting link the special facilities of the Union with its headquarters at Paris, London and Rome, were put at the service of the University men who happened to be in these places.

Training on the Campus

Many more University alumni and students entered the service during the summer of 1917.

The Plattsburg Summer Camp was well represented by University men. The opening of the 1917-18 session found organized military training in full swing on the campus, directed by Capt. J. Stuart Allen, who was assisted by J. V. Whitfield and Jonathan Leonard.

Some 600 students voluntarily took the course of instruction regularly which consumed about twelve hours per week. Eight faculty members also took the course.

War Department Approves

From the start the work of the University battalion won the highest sort of commendation and approval from those who visited the drill field. Early in May of the last year the War Department called on the University for all eligible members of the senior class who desired to attend officers' camps.

The first official recognition of the University's militant training came early in June of 1918 when the government designated the University as a Reserve officers' Training Corps.

Recognition was further extended in July, when 125 students and faculty members were appointed by the government through the University to attend the Plattsburg training camp for a period of 60 days. Of this number 60 were commissioned at the end of the course, September 16.

Summer War Activities Continued

The elaborate scheme of preparedness thus inaugurated was continued during the past summer. The University's military training camp at Asheville, under the directions of Capt. J. Stuart Allen, extending through a period of six weeks, was attended by 125 high school and college students and was judged highly successful.

The work of the six weeks' Summer School, under the direction of Dr. N. W. Walker, took on a war-time slant. Many new courses designated to train the teachers specially for war needs were introduced for the first time.

The University S. A. T. C.

Through the operation of an order issued by the War Department on August 24, the University along with 500 other institutions of the collegiate grade, become a unit of the Students' Army Training Corps.

The late president Graham was appointed by the committee on education and special training at Washington as regional director of the S. A. T. C. for the South Atlantic States.

Upon this basis the University was converted into a military camp, the dormitories into barracks, the dining hall into a mess hall, and every one of the 700 students in round numbers inducted into the S. A. T. C. on October first became soldiers of the United States Army, with the regular discipline and pay of privates.

The Y. M. C. A. assumed the function of an Army hut, with Secretary W. R. Wunsch in charge, and the general program of the University conformed to strict military requirements.

Students Liberally Support

The students not only offered their services to the government, but were ready with their money. In all the Y. M. C. A., Liberty Loan campaigns, and War Stamp and War Work drives the khaki boys gave wholeheartedly and unreservedly according to their means. In many cases the contributions represented real sacrifices.

The Faculty in Service

From the start to the finish twenty-seven members of the faculty, past and present, have donned the uniform and J. Henry Johnson, of the department of Education, has made the supreme sacrifice overseas. Many other members of faculty were engaged in government war work during their vacations and all were busily engaged in the work of the S. A. T. C. here.

The record of the alumni, faculty, and students in civil service is one to be proud of. No call has gone unheeded for a moment. And every member of these three groups from Secretary Daniels of the Navy, down to the latest contributor of the war work fund, has responded without stint, or limit.
