

APOLOGY TO PEPPS

Monday—Up bright and early with the merry birdlets this beautiful morning and, having said my prayers and brushed my teeth, to the old German One exam which did flunk purposefully, it not being in my heart to break a custom of three years training. Whereafter did he me to my room and pack ye old trunk and did leave sundry notices on the wall informing bed-robbing gentry of their pedigree. To Durham and thence to Haw River and in Durham did fool those slick city guys and did roll three apples from gentleman from Athens by way of Jerusalem putting three years of higher education to advantage.

Did have long talk with paw apropos certain checks made by me unauthorized and also German One. Also did strut my stuff with ye belles of the village. Did meet old Jake Jimpson, who runs the still for paw and did sample the produce. Did like to pass out. And so to bed with the chickens (getting up.)

Thursday—Back to the hill and then over to Durham where did hire one wild and woolly dress-suit from Uncle Ike. To dance where did student-council gent smell me for booze and me smelling like cloves was O. K., but Hiram Q. Asthma from Goose Junction did slip me ye old Ed. Pinaud bottle on the inside and I did put it inside me and did pull ye fragrant toddle.

LOCAL R. O. T. C. UNIT ISSUES NEWSPAPER

"Utellm," published by the R. O. T. C. unit is the latest undergraduate publication to appear on the Hill. The first issue came out Monday, and it is to be published once a week. All the current news of the R. O. T. C. is given, and also several jokes and sketches help make it interesting.

Major Boye and several assistants make up the staff, and the paper has the support of the faculty and other publications. The articles on the summer camp and work of the unit clearly set forth the advantages of military training. Plans are also under way of the erection of a separate R. O. T. C. building. When this is completed and the new equipment installed, "Utellm" will have a large field to cover.

As this paper is the official organ of the R. O. T. C. it will deal mainly with that news. This first issue shows its great possibility along this line. Although the initial number is in mimeographed form, it will be printed regularly in the near future. No other college or university in the State have a publication devoted to the R. O. T. C., though some of them have much larger units than there are here.

JOURNALISM SCHOOL IN LEE'S HONOR FOUNDED

Lexington, Va., March 26.—The Robert E. Lee School of Journalism, in honor of Gen. Robert E. Lee, is to be established here soon, President H. L. Smith of Washington and Lee University announced this afternoon. While General Lee was president of that school, he established a school of journalism in 1869. It was successful until his death, when it was discontinued because of lack of funds.

This journalism school established by Lee was the first one in the South. Fifty free scholarships were given by it every year, and many Southern editors received their training there. General Lee said that the need of trained editors in the South led him to found this school.

President Smith announced that many prominent editors and owners of newspapers in the South had heartily agreed to support this school. He will soon make a trip through the South to raise funds for it. Not only the editorial side of journalism, but the managerial side will be taught. It is planned to have presses used also for those who wish to learn the printing end of it.

GOOD CRIMINALS?

"No good crook ever takes a life." This is the conviction of Sophie Lyons of Detroit, in her day perhaps the most famous international criminal of her sex the world has ever seen.

"Criminals have no respect for the murderer. Real criminals will not associate with those who take life. I have pity for the man waiting for the electric chair, but I would never care to associate with him. I will send him something to cheer him, but that is all."

Seated in her modestly furnished home the other day this woman who has served terms in most of the famous prisons of the world and concerning whose late husband, William Burke, William Pinkerton said, "if there be such a thing as greatness among criminals, Burke is the greatest of them all," discussed the present "crime wave," prison reform and capital punishment.

In the 40 years since she abandoned her life of crime, she has become the author of "Why Crime Does Not Pay," and has amassed a fortune of $800,000 by honest pursuits, and since January 1, this year, has distributed $50,000 in charity, much of which has been spent in educating deserving young men and women.

"No great criminal ever stoops to take a life," she reiterated. "Great criminals are not murderers. They would rather give life than take it. Of all the master criminals I have met in my life, and I have met the greatest, I have never been associated with one who would take a life. Intelligent and great criminals do not even carry a gun."—Detroit Free Press.

fine pose; the God is represented as having just let go an arrow.

In the Library we also find a bust of Governor Vance, as a gift of the class of 1899. This is a piece of work from the hand of a North Carolina sculptor and artist, Mr. Randall.

No other pieces of sculpture are on display, but there are a number of busts and statuettes stored in the Alumni building. Among them is a bust of Robert E. Lee, given by the class of 1896. All of these were on exhibition before the Library was moved from the present Law building.

Paintings are more numerous than sculptures, but there are very few pictures of any real value. There is an oil painting of Michael and the Devil in Gerard hall, and it is the only picture of its kind here; the others are portraits of the notable University graduates. A portrait of Col. William R. Davie painted by the great French artist, Chretien, recently presented.

In the Library there are portraits of Presidents Caldwell, Swain, Battle, Winston, Alderman and Venable and also a number of portraits of notable alumni. The walls of the Phi and Di halls are covered with pictures of former members. The most important of these is the picture of James C. Dobbins, a former secretary of the navy, in the Phi hall. The government attempted to buy it, and when the society refused to sell it they had it copied. None of the pictures in the University are worthy of any special note.

HEAD SHAVING SPREE HITS STATE COLLEGE.

Only about seven or eight fellows took part in the raid, and that he would take stern action against them. Solicitor Norris has received several names from President Riddick, and summons were issued for their appearance before the grand jury which meets on April 11. No names of students involved have been disclosed, and the situation is to be treated as confidential until reviewed by the grand jury.

Numerous bald heads have been seen as a result of this hazing, downtown today. In one moving picture show eleven were counted. They are also conspicuous in all the restaurants and other public places. No expulsions of upperclassmen have occurred yet.
