A CHAPEL HILL HOTEL

The news that comes out of the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees that a hotel will be erected in Chapel Hill at an early date is as cheering as any word of the University that has in recent days come to our ears. From the press report of the meeting the news comes: "Out of the meeting will probably grow a new and adequate hotel building at the University. Imeptus was given the need when John Sprunt Hill, a trustee and leading business man of Durham, declared that he would give the Graves property, recently acquired by him, and $10,000 toward the construction of the building."

This word from the trustees shows how well they understand the needs of the University. They have not halted at the suggestion so admirably put by Mr. John Sprunt Hill but have taken steps to carry the idea on to fulfillment in the erection of the greatly needed hotel. In making the initial move Mr. Hill further identifies himself with the University where he has long been known as one of her chief and ablest benefactors.

Especially at this time when to such an extent the social side of University life is being discussed the news is particularly gratifying for it adds to the life here at least a future means of widening the social life here. At the present time there is scarce any accommodation for visitors who would otherwise come to us. Mothers who would see their sons find that the lack of a place to stay makes it impossible for them to come to Chapel Hill. Girls who come for the dances are forced to spend terribly uncomfortable nights in the few boarding houses where sometimes as many as ninety girls are sheltered during the days of dancing.

Great days such as Thanksgiving when the historic Virginia game is played, and Commencement when a class leaves in a fleeting flash of glory are made less beautiful and enjoyable by the poor accommodations that are afforded those who come to spend those great days with us.

The authorities of the University in realizing the cramped condition of the student body have also known the unhappy conditions that affect visitors who come to us yet they have seen as their larger duty the betterment of student conditions. This was particularly proper yet now that the legislature of the State has provided means for increased rooming facilities for students it is quite as proper that accommodations be provided for others who come to be for a little while only a part of the life of Carolina.

This news will be welcome to all who have the well being of the University at heart. It will provide not only room for travelers and visitors but a greater thing in giving to the University, by bringing people of the State to us, a further help in widening the social influences of the men at the University of North Carolina.

SCHEDULES

For some time there has been discontent on the campus over the schedules recently prepared for the various athletic teams. Last fall when only one game of the whole football season was played on the Hill during the residence of the student body many men expressed unfavorable criticism of the management. Now when the basketball team meets no team for two weeks during the middle of the season the same criticism is forthcoming.

Undoubtable there is much to be objected to in these schedules yet we feel that of all the worst is that prepared for the football team of next year when within seven days the eleven will meet three teams. This is bad enough in itself but that the third of these games should be that with the State college is almost unpardonable. This game that beside the Virginia contest is the most important on the entire schedule will be played by a Carolina team tired and perhaps crippled by two games played within the space of a week before it.

Such things as this in the making of schedules makes for criticism and criticism makes for a lack of spirit in the men who will play in those games. We would not attempt to dictate to those whose duty it is to prepare the schedules for the various athletic teams but it seems to us that there is great room for improvement in the preparing of schedules that might well be removed by timely and careful planning.

Intercollegiate Notes.

Few Players Are Able to Run Touch-down Back From Kickoff.

The New York Herald has compiled a list of all football men of the past season who were able to run a ball back from kickoff to a touchdown. Only fourteen men in the United States accomplished this feat in the past season.

The Herald says that any man can come from out of the mist and make a record for dropkicking, or punting, but it takes an accomplished football player, one with training, and the football instinct to run the ball from the kickoff to a touchdown. It rates this as one of the greatest, and one of the hardest plays in the game.

The entire Herald list follows:

Did Wisdom Dictate A Rich Uncle's Will?

"The more you learn, the more you know," is the theory advanced by William Cullen Bryant Kemp, who for the past 41 years has been enrolled as a student at Columbia University. Mr. Kemp is still a student; he has not missed a semester. "This rumored about Columbia that a wise uncle left a will, providing for his nephew as long as he was a regularly enrolled university student.

Mr. Kemp, who is over 50 years, is spending his time this year studying the paleogeographic development of North America. He has many degrees, including a "D. P. M." (doctor of perpetual motion), which was conferred on him by his fellow classmates.—The University Daily Kansan College Party to Mark the End of Exams at N. C. C.

The first big social of 1922 at North Carolina College will take place Saturday night, January 28, when the annual college party will be staged in the Spencer dining hall. This is the gala occasion for all the college and comes at an appropriate end to exam week. At this time everybody is ready and willing to

Hair

As a subject for a sketch hair has untold advantages. There are all kinds of hair—hair in mattresses, hair in group, light hair, dark hair, curly hair, straight hair—in fact the subject of hair can cover a multitude of sins.

In its proper place hair is all right on head, etc., it has many advantages but in food, in combs, and in your mouth it is very objectional. We have often wondered which is the most unpleasant, to eat hair at the table, or to have the hair of the girl with whom you are dancing come drifting into your mouth and then drift out and slap you in the eye.

Another quality that hair has is that of a barometer or personality. Hair under collars is a sign of hayseediness; hair on faces is a sign of crumbyness; hair on the chests indicates he-men, oiled hair parted in the middle is the sign of a cake-eater; and hair on upper lips indicates different things, it all depends on the looks of the hair.

O. Henry wrote a story once in which his chief character, a tramp, spent his time personifying cities. We have made a stab at the same thing with the towns in North Carolina.

Durham—Money-making man about thirty-five. Has dirty collars and finger nails but rides in a Packard. A keen business mind but not interested in anything else.

Raleigh—Social youth who parts his hair in the middle, has a family tree. Loafs a lot, a very good dancer and a hit with the women.

Greensboro—Healthy man of thirty, interested in many things, will never set the world on fire but good company and has lots of life.

Charlotte—Dignified dowager, thinks a lot of the past but more of the present, old ideals but new ideas.

High Point—Correspondent school man, lots of pep, will soon be given the head of his department and can come home to his wife with a doubled salary check, then they can get a car and build a new house.

Winston-Salem—Twins, one, a man, is active, ambitious, thinks more of the wear house than the bath room. The other, a woman, is a Moravian, reminds you of the time when Revolutionary spies hid in the coffee pot and shows you where George Washington stayed one night.

Asheville—A sport, plays a wicked game of golf, handles a mean tea cup, and keeps the lead flexible when playing bridge. Inherited money but knows enough to increase it, a good fellow.

Wilmington—Has ancestors and stock in the ship yards that pays and stock in the railroad that don't. Has not forgot the Civil War but knows about Federal Reserve Banks. Goes to church at home and gets lit at the beach.

birds, rabbits, and many other wild creatures of the forest. In the treasure cave scene many ghosts, goblins, skeletons and spooks dance. "From the moment the curtains part to the gradual fading out of the last happy picture on old Rip's return after 20 wandering years, the spectator is carried away by the fascinating and absorbing tale of the Catskill Mountains and its wierd inhabitants," ends the description of the performance.

throw off all cares and trouble and have all the fun that is possible.

As is customary this college party will take the form of a fancy dress ball and the gay costumes will add to the excitement. Prizes will be given for the prettiest, the cleverest and the funniest costume and competition is always fast and furious.—The Carolinian.

Davidson, Jan. 25.—J. S. (Spratt) Moore of Rock Hill, S. C., member of the Sophomore class, was elected captain of the Davidson football team for the 1922 season at a recent banquet of football letter men. Moore has been one of the outstanding stars of the Davidson team for the last two seasons and his election is expected to be a popular one on the campus.

STUDENT FORUM

Scars on the Campus.

Editor The Tar Heel:
Though we are innocent of some of our transgressions, hardly any of us can plead ignorant of the fact that to daily cut across our campus will make many small ugly paths. We already have some started, are we going to finish them?

I will concede to those who may contend that I am wrong, that fact which we all learned in geometry—a straight line is the shortest line between two points. That does not necessarily imply, though, that the shortest way is always the best. This fact was proved last quarter when many of the students sacrificed their examination time just to get away from the Hill to have more time to loaf in Durham. The result was obvious. Many were complete failures, others didn't make the grades they would have made had they not taken the short cut.

It is inevitable, that if we continue to cut across the campus we will eventually have cut a monument that will be dedicated to our selves by our selves. A monument that will show our visitors how indolent, slothful and drouish some of us have been. Just too lazy to follow the walks. But should we have to be threatened by what other people may think about us? Haven't we the self-respect and pride for our selves to preserve the things that are about us? The things we use daily and the manner in which we use them reflect upon our character.

It is a great temptation, we admit, to cut across the campus when we are trying to "make" an eight-thirty after sleeping until just about five minutes before the 8:25 bell. If that was the only time we did this the matter would not need so much attention, but by constant tramping across the campus we will soon have a habit started by all the students that will be incorrigible.

Let us all cooperate in this and in this way we can help make Carolina a prettier school, by preserving its campus.

Claude Dockery.

Editor The Tar Heel:

The Magazine was voicing the wishes of the student body when a few days ago it said that Manager Chas. Woolen would be heard, gladly, by the student body on any subject that he cared to speak, pertaining to the business of the University or otherwise.

Mr. Woolen is a big-hearted, cheerful man who commands the respect and good will of all that know him. Now that one of the business men of the University has identified himself in the eyes of the student body as an active participant in the events of interest on the campus, we turn to our other congenial business man who far exceeds Mr. Woolen in his big-hearted cheerfulness.

When checks are returned, un-honored, although the student may apologise, he (our other business man) grumbles occasionally. This of course is natural. He can't help it. He doesn't put the blame where it belongs but tries to leave the impression on the student, that the student was "beating" or trying to trick the University out of money rightfully belonging to it. He didn't ask if the student knew that the account had been checked out before giving the check he just said, "I'm getting tired of these checks coming back," and proceeded to register grumble-umble.

He never makes mistakes as he works by "system," he says. Yet ask him if he didn't acknowledge a mistake when one "hard boy" Mac came to pay a bill that had already been paid. His congeniality far exceeds that of any other member of the faculty and he works on the principle that to give his opinion about the affairs of others wins for him the full respect of the student body. One example, for instance, was when he told a disabled man that he did not believe in rehabilitation. That he thought the help offered them made them clinging vines to the government wall, that he was in favor of the men looking out for themselves and not looking to others for help and thereby reducing the "pull-your-own-weight" attitude of the individual receiving help. Looking at this matter from the standpoint of one who has been hindered by his own superabundant congeniality, he should appreciate the fact that he has always although hindered by this defect, worked his way through college and after life, he must know by experience what it is to more than pull your weight.

We heartily agree with him that the faculty owns the University and are doing the sons and daughters of the taxpayers a great favor in allowing them to come to the University, but from the cordiality of Dr. Chase, the smiling recognition of Dr. Wilson, and the heartiness of Mr. Woolen we somehow or other

Pertinent Paragraphs

Now that the Southern Conference has a constitution we would suggest that there be a supreme court to interpret it. Very likely Dr. Lambeth and LeFever would be glad to serve on it.

It's an ill wind that blows no good. Though the water pipes have been frozen at some of the boarding houses in town, the weather made the necessary lack of washing less objectional.

The wash women of the village paid no attention to the rumors of a laundry and got sorer and sorer. The pressers better take time by the forelock for there are rumors of a pressing department to be established in the laundry.

"Gee its cold today." "How do you know, you ain't been out 'o the house." "Huh, don't have to go out 'o the house; look out 'o the window and saw a freshman wearing a hat."

A new club is being formed, a club of students from above the Mason-Dixon line. Among other names suggested for it was "The Damn Yankee Club."

From the applause the students must not have thought Mr. Lomax a "big lummax."

The height of futility—trying to stop smoking in the Pick.

Why not try putting a little anti-tobacco drug in the coffee at Swain?

One thing sure: it could not make the coffee any worse.

Speaking of Swain, one freshman said he had been here three months before he knew that Harmon was stationed to keep people out rather than keep them in.

We feel that there is a new fad on our threshold; already one student has purchased himself a bicycle and according to reports, others will come with warm weather. And at that, it is not a bad idea.

We notice that the cards sent out for chapel absents have changed, now you have not been discourteous if you fail to go around and sweet talk the Registrar. Evidently Dr. T. J. got disgusted with the students' lack of originality.

Since Dr. Abernathy announced in chapel that he could tell whether a student was sick or lazy when he asked to be excused from classes that he had missed, it makes you feel sort of funny when you go to see him.

feel that they are glad the students are here.

Speaking unofficially for the student body and officially for myself, will say that if the faculty as a whole will continue to "get together" with students on their problems, the students will forget that one or two of the faculty entertain the idea that the University is faculty owned and controlled and think, as a whole, that the members of the faculty are good skates. Emmett Thornton.
