THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving is here.

The day is set aside as a national holiday, and in earnest and sincere prayer we lift our heads to the Maker with an expression of thanksgiving for the blessings of the year.

No year passes but what humanity has much to be thankful for. Some years are marked by financial difficulties, by poor health in our families, by an unusual number of worries in the various phases of our life, or by hundreds of other troubles. But every year has, as well, its blessings. In the face of trouble and danger often we overlook the fine things that come in our lives, but they are inevitably there, and whatever our station there has been a provision for some degree of happiness, for which we should feel truly and sincerely grateful.

This has been for the country a good and prosperous year. Here on the campus it has been exceedingly fine and healthy. As undergraduates we have more to be thankful for this year than ever before in practically every respect. We ought to be especially thankful for the great strides that the institution has taken, and for the great University that now we have the privilege to attend. The material prosperity—the splendid football team—for all this we should be thankful.

Matter not the degree of our orthodoxy, it cannot be out of order for every single student of the University to pause a moment this Thanksgiving season and reflect on the blessings that he has enjoyed and register a feeling of genuine gratification.

REPORTERS ADDED TO STAFF

J. O. Bailey and W. M. Saunders, both of the sophomore class, have been selected, after three weeks' intensive competition, to fill the two vacancies recently occurring on The Tar Heel reportorial staff. Among the other contestants, J. M. Roberts and R. W. Linker deserve honorable mention.

MARS HILL CLUB ENTERTAINED

Meeting Friday night in the Peabody building, the members of the Mars Hill Club of the University were guests of their co-ed member, Mrs. F. H. Eaton, former teacher in Mars Hill College. With the members present were outside invited co-eds. The room was tastefully arranged and the fun of the evening passed off to the delight of all present. Tables were arranged for the playing of progressive games of various sorts. Concluding the entertainment, refreshments were served.

Professor Harold D. Meyer, of the sociology department, went to Mebane Friday to organize two Parent-Teachers Association. Dr. Meyer has been very prominent in this work throughout the state.

THREE SPEAKERS DIVIDE CHAPEL PERIOD FRIDAY

Shirley on Traffic-Blocking, Dr. Dey On Red Cross and President Chase on Immigration.

Chapel Friday morning was a succession of short talks by E. R. Shirley, Dr. W. M. Dey, and President Chase. In a pointed little speech Shirley, president of the senior class and athletic association, protested against the practice which some students have lately engaged in, of crowding around and retarding the departure of notes carrying fair visitors to the high school football games away from the Hill. This, as Shirley put it, is often embarrassing to the visitors, and is entirely foreign to the dignity of college men. Moreover, it sometimes results in accidents.

Dr. Dey, of the French department, then briefly presented the cause of the Red Cross. He explained that its purpose since the war has been to render service to the army and navy; to furnish nurses and medical aid in localities where they cannot be easily obtained; to prevent calamities resulting from fires, etc.; and to provide a junior Red Cross for the benefit of the young people. He appealed to the students to respond to the drive which is being made now by the Red Cross.

Dr. Chase spoke on the crowding of America's industrial centers by immigrants, and the conditions resulting from the introduction of this foreign element. "The south has a great opportunity," he said. "The tide of immigrants have never swept over it. It has remained the old historical center of America, and has lacked nothing in the past but natural resources. The industrial area has material resources, but it lacks the Americanism which the south has. The material resources of North Carolina are being developed, and the human resources which it has always had are as promising as ever. It is our duty, then, to help assimilate the crowds of immigrants which are continually pouring into our country."

Dr. Jesse P. Steiner, chairman of the committee on prison legislation, together with Dr. H. W. Odum, Dr. J. H. Pratt and Dr. W. B. Sanders, went to Greensboro Thursday to attend the meeting of the committee.

STUDENTS LIKE MUSIC SAYS PROFESSOR McKIE

A visitor to Chapel Hill who might find his way into the Pickwick theater and take home his opinion of college culture from what he found there, is usually not likely to have a very exalted idea of Carolina taste and enlightenment.

Really, the very much tattered rags, in lieu of music, that is vended at the Pickwick, usually, is not a very good criterion of the Carolina man's likes. All this is simply quoting from a few remarks that Prof. McKie made, incidentally, before his class in public speaking, a few days ago. He went on to say:

"When I go to the Pick, I find that the students do like to hear music, for when the orchestra stops for an instant there is an immediate cry for 'music!' The students take what they can get, and yell if they can't get anything."

"But that the students like real music better than banging has long been an opinion of mine; and recently it was confirmed. I happened to be in the Pick on an occasion when the orchestra played 'Sole Mio.' When this selection was done, the usual clamor was lacking, and instead the audience applauded in real appreciation, until the orchestra 'played it again' and again."

Professor McKie concluded by wondering if the Pickwick management might not do well to cater to the real tastes of their patrons, rather than to their vacuity.

Shoes. Which kind gets you there the quickest?

Two college men were walking down the road, when a classmate whizzed by in his car.

"Pretty soft!" sighed one.

Said the other, "I'll show him. Some day I'll own a car that's got his stopped thirty ways."

The more some men want a thing, the harder they work to get it. And the time to start working—such men at college know—is right now.

All question of classroom honors aside, men would make college count for more if they realized this fact: You can buy a text book for two or three dollars, but you can sell it for as many thousand—once you have digested the contents.

This is worth remembering, should you be inclined to the self-pity which social comparisons sometimes cause. And anyway, these distinctions are bound to be felt, even though your college authorities bar certain luxuries as undemocratic—as perhaps they are.

The philosophy that will carry you through is this: "My day will come—and the more work I crowd into these four years, the quicker I'll make good."

Architecture—Today and Tomorrow

THE great buildings of today, designed in masses which rear rugged, mounting profiles into the sky, forecast even greater and more massive structures for the next half century. Always a close coordination of architecture and engineering, of design and construction, the architecture of the future will find architect and engineer working ever more closely together.

Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.
